NEW YORK DIRECTOR OF LOTTERY WARNS

The vendors are in New York City, Buffalo and Rochester. The tickets of the Buffalo vendor have already been confiscated, his license has been suspended and he may be subjected to prosecution, Mr. Quinz declared.

Chinese Subdued Rather Than Distraught Over Mao

PEKING, Saturday, Sept. 11-A journey of 1,500 miles through China yesterday from Hong Kong to Canton, to Shanghai and finally to this capital-found the Chinese people subdued and pensive rather than shocked and distraught after the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

If there was one overriding perception yesterday, it was of the mouraful music that could be heard almost everywhere. She waited two nights at her friend's house, then, needing some clothes, decided to go home. The officials, who were still waiting, took her into custody and sent her to remote-Dong Nang Island, 70 miles north of Vientiane. There, with 200 other women, including 40 drug addicts, principally smokers of marijuana and opium, they cleared land, put up buildings and listened to hours of lectures—on the greatness of Laos; on the usefulness of work, on pride in their homeland— from dawn until well into the night. After 40 days an order arrived for her release. Her mother, having a friend in the district Communist organization, got a paper saying she was essential to the support of her family, so she was released with 15 others who had convinced the officials that they had learned their lessons.

"There will not be any more, not for a long time," said Chansamone, a small figure with hair down to her waist and a thin, nervous smile. Only she and two or three others released with her have remained in Laos, the rest having fled across the Mekong as soon as they could. "I do not blame them," she said. "The Reports from Belgrade, however, said that the 84-year-old Yugoslav leader had returned from a hunting trip in the western Yugoslav mountains with the visiting President of Rumania, Nicolae Ceausescu and that the two leaders spent much of the rest of the day in political talks.

Diplomatic sources there said that farshal Tito's illness appeared to be more diplomatic than physical, and they sug-gested that President Giscard d'Estaing had decided on his own to cancel the ist, which was to have begun on Wednesday.

The source noted that Yugoslavia had been a principal organizer of a meeting last month of so-called nonaligned na-tions in Sri Lanka, where a resolution was adopted calling for a boycott against some French goods on the ground that France had sold arms to South Africa.

Elysée Palace, in its announcement, did not specify the nature of Marshal Tito's illness that it said had caused the postconement of the visit to Yugoslavia. a French diplomatic source said that the Yugoslav leader had suffered a mild heart attack and had been ordered to take a complete rest for two months.

The Yugoslav Foreign Minister, Milos Minic, flew from Belgrade earlier in the day to deliver a message from President Tito to Mr. Giscard d'Estaing.

It was announced here that the message contained President Tito's regrets for having to ask for a postponement of the visit for reasons of health. The Elysée Palace said Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had conveyed "warm salutations and best wishes" to the Yugoslav leader.

Reports from Belgrade, however, quoted diplomatic sources as having ex-pressed belief that Mr. Minic had made a last-minute effort to persuade the French President to go ahead with the visit. After the announcement by the Elysee

Some of the Welsh try to laugh it off. It is said here that an alien government—sometimes England, sometimes Ireland—advised Wales to produce more water by diluting it. And it is said that Martians landed here, looked for evidence of moisture on earth and went back dry.

Nevertheless, the drought, now two years old here, is beginning to bite hard. Schools reopened this week, but some close early when the water goes off. So working mothers leave their jobs early to take their children home. Trout have been dying in shrunken and stagnant rivers, and the thickening concentration of bacteria in rivers has endangered swimmers. The start of the soccer and rugby seasons has been delayed because playing surfaces are Like many Welshmen, David Bell, proprietor of the White Swan Pub in Llanfrynach, has put rocks in the tanks of his toilet to reduce the amount of water used in flushing. Signs in his restrooms urge people not to flush unless they think they have to, and Mr. Bell leaves a bucket of water near the toilets to be poured into the tanks when the water is off.

Fewer Wash Days

In the village of Ynysybwl, Meurig Ellis, a metal worker, said his family now washes clothes once a week instead of twice, "And we save the bath-water for the toilet," he said, "because there's no water coming into it until the next morning."

Bathwater, in fact, may be eclipsing coal as southeast Wales' principal natural resource. With garden hoses banned, a lot of bathwater ends up in the garden "We collect it in buckets at home," said Harry Crippin, secretary of the City of Cardiff, "We use it to kill the black fly on the roses. Bathwater is good for killing black fly."

Mr. Crippin said that the city of Cardiff has stopped watering its parks and washing its buses and streets. It tried to stop watering its 16 bowling greens, but replacing dead grass would cost £8,000, or $14,240, so water is being trucked in from underground streams near the port.

The economic cost so far has been relatively light. About 500 jobs have been lost in small businesses, such as car washes, which have been forced to close, and in laundries, hairdressers' and dentists' offices. Many now can

Auto Workers End Strike in Argentina; Plants in Operation

By JUAN de ONIS

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 10-Argentina's striking automobile workers returned to their jobs today. The strike, which involved 20,000 workers at its height, was the most serious that the ruling military junta has faced since it took power in March. The labor action was met by a decree threatening the strike's organizers with as many as 10 years in prison.

The auto workers, whose union was militant in winning wage demands in the past, have been particularly affected by reduction in weekly working hours. Their industry has cut back on production drastically after a sharp drop in demand in April and May. However, faced with the threat of dismissal without severance pay, the striking workers at the Ford, Chrysler, Mercedes-Benz, General Motors and Fiat plants have gradually returned

Ford Says 91% Report In

Ford representatives said that of 2,086 workers due in this morning for the early shift, 1,898, or 91 percent, came in. Chrysler was operating normally at both its truck and automobile plants, and was considering an overtime shift tomorrow to catch up on lost production. General Motors is operating only three days a week and will reopen its plants Monday. Violence, which has accompanied many union-management disputes in Argentina's past, was part of this one, too. Carlos Balsa, the 32-year-old Chrysler supervisor in charge of the company's car fleet, was machine-gunned to death as he arrived home from work last night.

Explosions in large electrical transformer stations blacked out sections of La Plata, the capital of Buenos Aires Province, and San Fernando, north of here. The Electric-Services Company of Greater Buenos Aires said the explosions were the work of skilled saboteurs.

Secluded Vermont Estate May Be Solzhenitsyn Home

CAVENDISH, Vt., Sept. 10 — Behind locked, chain link gare, two and a half miles up a steep, whiting dirt in it. Last year, Mr. Solzhenitsyn had road that a wolf wouldn't chase a taken part in a summer Russian lantroika over, lies the American hideaway of exiled, dissident Russian author Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn.

Or, if you believe one Alexis Vinogradov, it doesn't.

Since the reports on Wednesday that the Nobel Prize winning author was decamping from his Swiss residence, purportedlyforfear of Soviet agents, and had told the United States Immigration Service Cavendish was his destination; this little south-the old house on the property.

Mr. Vinogradov, who described himself as a "friend" of Mr. Solzhenitsyn. was lured to the gate early this morn-ing by the honking of a car horn. A new sign on the gate said: "Honk and wait."

After throwing up his arms and attempting to flee at the sight of a reporter, Mr. Vinogradov insisted that the property was to be his home and not that of Mr. Solzhenitsyn, who has

He said he had moved to New York and now was planning to put up a studio and move here. Other sources said he had done much of the scheduling and arrangements for the author's tours in America

Mr. Vinogradov claimed that he had

Suggests Address for Máil

Asked why Mr. Solzhenitsyn had told the immigration officials that Cavendish was his destination, Mr. Vinogradov suggested that it was possible the author had just given the name of the town so that his copious mail could be handled here by his friend. Mr. Vinogradov declined to give his age. He departed back down the path before he could be asked if if was the fall foliage that had drawn him here. ### Mrs. Wallace's Wiretap Spurs Questions on Marriage By B. DRUMMOND AYRES Jr. .

Special to The New York Times . . MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 10-The disclosure this week that many of Gov. George C. Wallace's bedroom telephone conversations had been surreptitiously recorded, apparently by his wife, has raised questions about the stability of the Governor's marriage.

Friends of the Wallace family and some of those involved in investigating the eavesdropping say privately that the Governor's 37-year-old wife, Cornelia, decided to tap her husband's phone to determine whether he was discussing her with other women perhaps in disparaging terms.

She is also said to have suspected that the Governor, 57 years old and crippled from the waist down since a 1972 assassination attempt, had ordered some of his aides to keep watch on her daily activities. She Has Not Commented

Mrs. Wallace, an outgoing former country music performer who likes to speculate periodically about the possibility of succeeding her husband as Governor, has not commented on the eavesdropping. The Governor, in a hastily called news conference late Wednesday, said the matter was "purely domestic, involving me and my wife,"

Both the Governor and Mrs. Wallace are reported to have been in contact with attorneys since a security guard at the Governor's mansion discovered the bug-"If you folks in the press would leave us alone in a domestic matter, we'll solve

About New York

That Overshadowed Race in the North Bronx

By MURRAY SCHUMACH

What with five Democrats seeking the nomination for United States Senator from New York next Tuesday, very little attention is being paid to a Demo-cratic primary fight in the North Bronx, though this is the only case where the Bronx Democratic organization is trying to unseat a Democratic Assem-

This lack of general interest does not surprise residents of the North Bronz. For, apart from the fact that a primary race for the Assembly is rarely vital in the larger world of politics, the North Bronx, like other middle-class areas of the city, such as Mill Basin in Brooklyn or Bayside, Queens, or most sections of Staten Island, rarely occupies center stage of the city's endless drama.

The conviction that the North Bronx is neglected because it is middle class is one of the few points on which Assemblyman Vincent A. Marchiselli and his chief rival, Alfred Locascio,

"We don't get our share of social services because we are regarded as a middle-income area," says Assemblyman Marchiselli. "Actually, this area has been hard hit in recent years. Many of the people are in construction work where unemployment is very high. Many others are in the city Civil Service and have become victims of budget slashes. So where there used to be two incomes in a family, you now have one. Sometimes none. Mr. Locascio says:

"Our trouble is that we are not a poverty area. All the money is earmarked for poverty areas. Ours is a stable neighborhood. It is unique. This is the last foothold in the city before you cross into Westchester."

The battleground for this primary—the 86th A.D., where both candidates were born—is dominated by private homes and inhabited mainly by residents of Italian, Irish, German and East European descent. In addition, since the turn of the century, and perhaps earlier, a substantial community of blacks has lived in the North Bronx.

Until shortly after World War II the many spacious lots of the area were natural playgrounds for youngsters and there are still some dirt roads in the North Bronx where the main thoroughfares include White Plains Road, Gun Hill Road, Neried Avenue, 233d Street and Boston Road. Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola, a Democrat, lives in the North Bronx, and so does the Bronx Republican leader, State Senator John D. Calandra.

Some significant changes have occurred in this area since World War II, with the construction of many large apartment buildings, particularly of the Mitchell-Lama variety, and a low-in-come project, Edenwald. The area became increasingly black and Hispanic. Swarms of real estate "blockbusters" descended on the neighborhood, Crime and drug addiction increased.

However, the large majority of the newly arrived blacks and Hispanic people who bought homes and rented apartments in the North Bronx are trying desperately to maintain middlevalues and to prevent the spread of the pockets of violence and ugliness.

This is the setting for the strange political war of the North Bronx, Mr. Marchiselli says that Patrick J. Conningham, Democratic leader of the Bowling Green closed about two years ago, when the United States Customs Service moved to the World Trade Center. This summer the Custom House was opened to the public and since then 55,000 visitors have streamed in to view the 69-year-old building with its 44 Corinthian columns, Daniel Chester French sculptures, Reginald Marsh murals and marble lobby.

The Custom House will again be closed next Sunday, Sept. 19, giving the public only seven more visiting days. The idea behind the opening of the Custom House, which, incidentally, is on the original site of Fort Amsterdam, built by the Dutch in 1626, was to generate thoughts on how the now-vacant building could be Bronx, has become personally involved in the fight against him because, as an insurgent in 1974, he undermined Mr. Conningham's prestige by defeat-ing the regular candidate, Mr. Locascio. "All of Pat Cunningham's guns are trained on me," he says. Mr. Locascio says only that he has ganization in the area, though the North Bronx Democratic Club. Of Mr. Cunningham's role, he says: "I am not runningham countrywide."

What does it mean to run against the Democratic organization in a mid-dle-class area like the North Bronx? First, there is an apparent aftereffect of Watergate. "Ever since Watergate," says Mr. Marchiselli, "people are turned off on politics. It is tough enough to get them out for a regular election, much less for a primary. And unless you get out the vote in a primary how do you beat en organization?"

Posters, for instance, Mr. Locascio's posters are all over the area; tacked high on poles, leaning inside store win-dows, pasted to buildings. Many of Mr. Marchiselli's posters are to be found crumpled in trash cans.

So an insurgent seeks out allies. Mr Marchiselli has the support of Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams, He has also been getting help from such unions as District Council 37, the Transport Workers Union and the United Federation of Teachers, which, elsewhere in the Bronx are supporting organization candi-

And then he had to set up a headquar ters to compete in old-fashioned political techniques with the North Bronx Demo-cratic Club. So for two years, with his wife, Bernice, and volunteers, he has operated a storefront under the el along White Plains Road.

He estimates that this office has helped about 1,000 persons in getting food stamps, forming tenant groups, stirring up agencies to pave streets, clean sewers and collect garbage. And in showing residents how to fill out the countless forms that bloom with Government assistance. "When people come to us," says Mr. Marchiselli, "we never ask them their politics. But we hope they will remember

To refresh this recollection he has set up another storefront, where volunteers mail out his campaign literature and go through the registration lists, telephoning possible supporters the kind of work that is done for a regular randidate at an established club. He also goes to meetings and coffee klatches wherever he can find them.

And he is to be found almost every day at subway stations, his legs in braces, crutches under his armpits, symbols of a lifetime of beating the occasions, and quite possibly Mr. Mehta has led a better account of the orchestral score, too. Somehow their collaboration at this concert never seemed to catch fire.

The performance was, on the whole, a leaden affair, with muddy textures, shapeless rhythmic definition and little thematic clarity—partly a problem of the work itself, but one that can be solved with judicious instrumental balancing. Mr. Arrau threaded his way through the murk in a rather cooly objective fashion, occasionally making a telling point here and there, but hardly with the power and concen-tration that he has brought to bear on this music in the past.

better impression. Mr. Mehta extracted as much lyrical warmth and drama as he could without overdoing things, and the orchestra responded with some very distinguished playing. It was not exactly a performance of searching profundity or of any spe-cial architectural incidity, but in terms of sheerly beautiful orchestra sound there was much to admire.

As a result of preventing the planned transfer, Mr. Ross asserts, Mariborough $3,442,000 against the $7.3 million judgment, the papers note.

Mr. Ross's application asks for im-position of a fine for "the contempt committed" by Mr. Lloyd and his asso-

His playing was expert throughout, and it tended more toward crispness and objectivity than toward moodiness and volatility. His singing of a tango was a minor matter, because, as he noted, he is not a singer, but it added to the charm and informality of a pleasant evening with a young guitarist of talent and

Dance: Tapping Upbeat Program

Jerry Ames, Past Master of the Art, and Company Are Seen at Marymount Manhattan Theater

During an informal improvisation Jerry Ames asked, with a smile, "Have you ever seen an unhappy tap dancer?"
On reflection, one couldn't remember any, and there were certainly none at Marymount Manhattan Theater Thursday evening as the Jerry Ames Tap Dance Company gave an upbeat and very happy program.

Mr. Ames is one of our very best tap dancers, favoring that high and light style that emerged when ballet's lifted torso made an impression on popular dancing. To be sure, the floor is still paramount as a sounding board, but ot it has been added the possibilities of gestural expression.

Among a series of solos that linked the various parts of the program, "Per-tidia" most effectively showed Mr. Ames's special talents. It was a combination of torrero turns, slow taps and chattering fluries of steps that had Spanish flavoring along with a sinuous thathmic phrasing. It was highly con-centrated in its use of space and lushly inventive within its self-imposed limita-

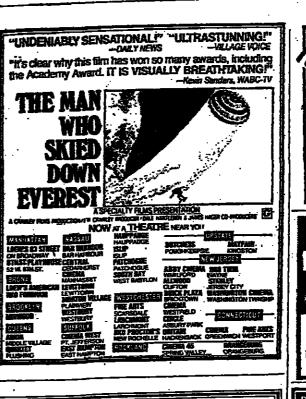

"The Tapists," which opened the evening, featured Kathy Burke, Cindy Mast and Sunny Summers chattering away in unison as they produced typewriter sounds with their feet and shoved imaginary machine carriages with enthusiastic flair. They were with enthusiastic flair. They were joined by David Finch and Gary McKay for "Slip and Slide," which had the shuffling, scratchy movements that were the specialties of the traditional "sand dancers." Rumor has it that in the old days when tap shoes were not the click and the special security and se available the talented youngster could always make an impression sculfing around in a thin layer of sand on a hard floor.

Miss Burke's "Maid of Rhythm" put together flecks and touches of tapping, along with graceful poses that formed a low-key, mood number. In his "Elegante," Mr. Ames decorated the musi-cal line with a constant patter of steps that were characterized by a light, fast attack playfully restrained.

During the finale, pounded out by the entire company to "Give My Re-gards to Broadway." one kept thinking of Mr. Ames's question about unhappy tap dancers, and wondered conversely whether one has ever seen an unhappy tap audience. The answer is an equally firm negative, which is rare in any art form.

Miss Nordstrom, a former assistant to Richard Roud, program director of the New York Film Festival, also headed up the 1972 women's festival held at the Fifth Average Cinema.

She said that that 17-day event drew 10,000 people, and was "a success, but not a financial success, even though we broke the house record for a week at the Fifth Avenue Cinema." Emough money was realized, however, she said, to pay her a salary of $5,200. Miss Nordstrom and Miss Laiman said that this year's festival was much more ambitious, with a larger theater, more entries to choose from (700, compared with 500 in 1972), ticket sales expected to hit 40,000, and a special fourday Women's Film Conference, at which the women film makers will discuss strategies for increasing the participation of women in the film industry. The conference will be held Sept. 17 to 20 at the Barbi-zon Hotel for Women. Among the feature films having their United States premieres dur-ing the festival are "Rising Target." by Barbara Frank of the United States, a documentary about the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy, "Daguerreotypes," by Agnes Varda of France, a poignant documentary about the Rue Daguerre, where Miss Varda has lived for many years; "Femmes Au Soleil." by Liliane Dreyfus of France, about hree bourgeois couples on vacation in the south of France, and "Aloise" by Liliane de Kermadec of France, starring Delphine Seyrig as a sensitive young woman who has a peryous breakdown at the start of World War I and remains in an insane asylum for the rest of her life, and "Love Under the Crucifix," by Kinuyo Tanaka of Japan, about a young woman in feudal Japan who is desired by a powerful warlord, but loves a Christian instead.

France, with five, has the largest contingent of women directors represented in the feature-film category. Only three American women appear in this division: Miss Frank, Susan Sontag, with her 1974 documentary about Israel after the last war, "Promised Lands," and Martha Coolidge, with her 1975 film about rape, "Not a Pretty Picture.'

"In France, there is more interest in making films about the heart and mind, and that's the kind of film women make," explained Miss Laiman, who is 30 and strongly resembles Lily Tomlin. "What the American film industry wants is adventure films with fistfights, car chases and two male buddles. That's not the kind of film women make.'

Did the films selected for the festival have to have a feminist orientation? "No." Miss Laiman re-plied. "Our only criterion was artistic merit, but the 14-member selection committee was all women, and any film offensive to women was not selected."

Dyan Cannon, best known as an actress, but who has been complaining lately about the lack of good roles available to actresses, will be at the festival with the short film she directed, "Number One," about how the lives of four children are affected by the adults around them.

Miss Cannon will also take part, along with actresses Tamara Dob-son and Cornelia Sharpe, in a free panel discussion on the lack of roles for actresses, from 6 to 8 P.M. Tuesday, called "Where is the New Woman?" Six other free panels will be held during the fe at Public School 199, at 270 West 70th Street a five-minute walk from the Cinema Studio. It will include such topics as "Black Women in Film," "Women and Film Unions" and "The Image of Women in Television.'

Differences Cited

Other special events at the festival include a program of short films for the elderly, called "The Golden Years"; a program for chil-dren, called "Cartoons and Characters," and a retrospective of the films of Dorothy Arzner and Ida Lupino.

"It's amazing to see the difference in these two women's films," Miss Nordstrom said, "Miss Arzner made most of her films in the 1930's, when actresses like Katharine Hepburg and Joan Crawford had really good parts, and none of her women had a traditional women's role. Miss Lupino's films are from the 1950's, and her women all give up their careers for love and assume a traditional role."

Male directors are not excluded from the festival. Stig Bjorkman of Sweden is represented in the feature-film category with "The White Wall," about a day in the life of a divorced housewife, played by Har-riet Anderson, and there are seven short films by men.

Tour Planned Later

After the festival ends here, Miss to take it on a 10-city tour around the United States. They also plan to do a book on the festival, and to polish two screenplays they have written together, "Coyote Kit," a women's humorous western, and "Unicorn," a robbery film with a strong woman character.

"Our goal is to make a statement that there can be interesting women characters in films," Miss Laiman said. "We want people to be able to go to the movies and find out that there are women who can be entertaining, and that they aren't just prostitutes and girl-

Richie Havens Is at Bottom Line

Richie Havens seemed to pop up at almost every folk and rock concert held in New York in the late 1960's. He would flail mightly at his guitar; which was tuned to an open chord, and sing the same set of songs, finishing off with "High Flying Bird" or "San Francisco Bay Blues." But his voice had an appealingly grainy quality and he always pleased his audiences, even when they had heard the same songs and arrangements dozens of

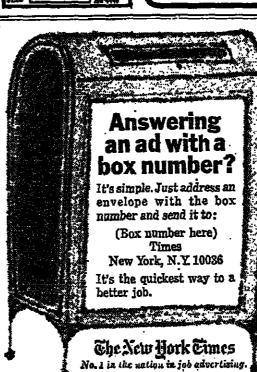

At the Bottom Line on Thursday Mr. Havens was still playing his guitar in open tuning and his audi-ence was still enthusiastic, so much so that they applauded wildly each time he strummed more vigorously than usual. He was still performing via old favorites, and both he and his audience were still satisfied with them. Mr. Havens also sang several new songs with band accompaniment. He is an affecting singer, but he can be difficult for a band to follow and for the most part his capable musicians were reduced to reinforcing the driving rhythms of his guitar.

Joan Armatrading also sang and although her songs are not yet familiar, they all have a relatively narrow, bluesy melodic range. She has a lovely voice, but her performance style is somewhat plain and her arrangements follow typical patterns. Between her lack of melodic variety and Mr. Havens's repetitions, the entire evening took on a decidedly static quality, like the incredibly long unfolding of a single pentatonic scale. ### Lauda's Return to Racing Spoiled by Rain at Monza

Wiki Lauda, recovering from burns and smoke inhalation suffered in a crash during the German Grand Prix Aug. 1, drove a Ferrari over the world champion from Austria drove only two laps before returning to the "pits. "It's impossible to run in this ram," he said. "I feel good. I seem to revive when I'm behind the wheel. I'm here to train myself with a view toward winning races after Monza. There's no rancor between me and [Carlos] Reutemann." The Argentine recently was hired by Ferrari as a third driver behind Lauda and Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland.

Lauda received permission yesterday from his physicians to compete and he then underwent Monza's mandatory medical examination. Tomorrow's 186.4-mile race is the 13th of 16 Grand Prix runs for 1976. During his enforced hospital stay, Lauda's 30-point lead was reduced to 2, by James Hunt of Britain, 58-56.

.. The champion's appearance at Monza was greeted with loud applause and shouts of "Lauda, Lauda," from one of the largest crowds in several years to watch the trials at the Italian track.

Charles O. Finley, the owner of the Oakland A's, said he's going to the plate for his club as a designated hitter. He added that he has kept in con-dition by fighting with his players for the last five years, and that he is "in better shape than most of the A's. Since Bill Veeck has seen fit to acti-vate Minnie Minoso, 53, I certainly feel I can swing a bat for the A's at 58.

I feel as good as I did at 28." Finley said it would be up to Manager Chuck Tanner to decide when he would be needed in the lineup.

The Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Union voted unanimouly yesterday to submit the name of Howard Davis Jr. of Glen Cove, L.L., for consideration for the Sullivan Award, given annually to America's outstanding amateur ath-lete. Davis, four times a New York Golden Gloves champion and the world amateur featherweight titleholder in 1974, won the gold medal in the lightweight boxing division at the Montreal Olympics. "Howard meets all the cri-teria for Sullivan honors—character, sportsmanship, leadership and an outstanding record in amateur sport," said Morris Weissbrot, the president of the A.A.U. "A boxer never has received the highest honor in the world of amateur sport. We feel it's about time such recognition is accorded."

Jets Inept at Sacking Quarterbacks

By GERALD ESKENAZI Special to The New York Times

HEMPSTEAD, L.I., Sept. 10-The weather was cloudy and uncertain as the Jets sloshed through their final workout today before they play their first regular-season game under the new regime.

One player who made it back from limbo, where so many Jets found themselves this week, was Don Buckey. The rookie wide receiver was reactivated after the club dropped Mike Hennigan, a new linebacker, who failed his physical examination.

Another Jet with a job guarantee, Jerome Barkum, stayed on the sidelines. The starting wide receiver has not recovered from a hamstring pull and may not play this week.

In a sense, the weather mirrored the team's outlook. For the Jets have no logical reasons to think they will do well Sunday at Cleveland. On the other hand, they know they won't be worse than their 1-5 preseason mark.

The quarterback the Jets will be facing is Mike Phipps. He has a kindred spirit in the Jets' Joe Namath. Each was sacked 28 times last year.

Timing Is Important The sack is an odd statistic, the only one a defensive lineman has next to his name in the weekly sheets prepared for newsmen.

On the Jets, these numbers have been small.
"They're not all that significant," contends Ed Galigher, the defensive right tackle who had one sack in ex-

if a quarterback can find his primary receiver right away, then, whoosh, the pass is gone quickly and you don't have a sack."

Generally, bad teams don't have many sacks. The good teams get the sacks. It is not necessarily because one team's front four is superior.

It is simply easier to sack a quar-terback whose team is behind, especial-

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Sept. 10 (AP)-Jack Creavy shot a six-over-par 78 in the rain-soaked final round and won the New York State Senior golf championship by three strokes today at the McGregor Country Club.

The 60-year-old Creavy, runner-up last year, led after each of the three rounds to finish with 227 in the 54-hole event. Angelo Biviano of Norwich was second at 230 after a final round of 77, today's best score. James Sampson Oneonta and Horace Meredith of North Syracuse tied for third at 231.

ly late in the game, and everyone in the park knows he will throw. "There isn't one lineman who can sack a quarterback who's just going straight back and releases the ball as soon as he's finished his drop," adds

Richard Neal, the right end. "You look at Joe [Namath] and all the times he got sacked last year. He can't run out of the pocket, but even he wouldn't be sacked if he could hit his primary receiver."

Jets Are Sad at Sacks

Neal also had only one sack in exhibition play. The Jets got to opposing quarterbacks only 10 times in the six games. But in their last game alone, Namth and Richard Todd were downed 10 times. "Sacks?" said Jim Champion, the head of the defensive line, who still calls people he likes a "good ole boy." "A sack is something you get on passing downs. Now wait a minute. Don't laugh at that. That's not as simple as it sounds. When you must throw the ball is when you're likely to get sacked. You look at the record and I'll bet you find most sacks occur in the fourth quarter, against a team that's behind."

What Champion is looking for Sunday is what he describes as "Phsew . . four people getting together and putting on the rush. Not necessarily a sack, just pressure, enough pressure to make Phipps rush his pass."

To get to Phipps in time to sack him requires about 3½ seconds—and there are people in the way to get around. Still, despite what Phipps insists is an incomplete the properties this season he was improved operation this season, he was sacked 10 times in six preseason games.
"That's not so much," he says. "Some of those sacks were times I ran with the ball and was caught behind the line of scrimmage."

Is this week a breather for him? "There are several teams in this league that don't show you everything in preseason," he said, being charitable and hinting that perhaps the Jets were hiding their best plays for the real season. "I don't go into any game under-

Giants Hoping to Settle a Score With Allen, Redskins Tomorrow

PLEASANTVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 10-Two days to go and the Giants are talking less about how much they dislike the Washington Redskins and more about how much they like themselves.

Two days to go and they are talking more about the game in Washington being just an opener and not a grudge match with George Allen.

The Giants do not like the Redskins' coach—"He has rubbed our noses in the past," said Brad Van Pelt—nor do they like his won-lost record against them: 13-0 over all and 10-0 as the Washington coach. They have great re-spect for the Redskin club, which figures, after being defeated by Washington, 49-13, and 21-13, last season.
"We want the Redskins," had become almost the battle cry of the young Giant team, especially after its 17-0 preseason victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers three weeks ago. Some players grew "Washington beards," to be shaved only if they beat the Redskins. But the tone now is less emotional, quieter. And more confident.

'An Emotional Game'

"We think we're going to have a pretty good season," said Doug Van Horn, the offensive right tackle who is one of only three players remaining from the last Giant team to beat the Redskins in 1970 (Pat Hughes and Bob Tucker are the others). "It's an emotional game, but you have to put things in perspective.

This is a league game, it's the league opener, it counts on the record and it's one of 14."

"This is going to see what we have," said Craig Morton, the quarterback. "We haven't made many mistakes this preseason. We made them all last year, even in preseason [when the Giants also had a 4-2 record]. When we don't make mistakes, we're going to be

Morton praised his offensive line, which in the last few years has had trouble with the Redskins, and said the key to the game was there, "up front." "If we beat them physically, we're going to beat them. If they beat us physically, they're going to beat us," he said.

Morton Expresses Philosophy "We're not going to get involved in doing things we don't do well," Morton said. "We're just going to run the football right up their gut, that's our philosophy. Not too many teams have that philosophy. Even Pittsburgh uses Franco Harris a lot to the outside. We're more like Eos Angeles, a power team. They know what to expect."

Morton expected the Redskins to vary their defenses—using a fifth defensive back instead of a linebacker in passing situations and a fifth lineman instead of a linebacker even on first or second down when the Giants. with Larry Csonka, can be expected

"We'll be ready," said Morton.

Kilmer Now a 'Probable' Billy Kilmer, the Redskins' quarterback, will wear padding around his bruised ribs and has been taken off the "questionable" list and moved to the "probables." The only Giant who is "doubtful" is Harry Carson, the rookie linebacker with a pinched nerve in his neck. . . . Larry Mallory, a reserve defensive back, has replaced. Morton as the holder on field-goal and extra-point attempts.

Rule 14 of the United States Tennis Association handbook states that "if a player serves out of turn, the player who ought to have served shall serve as soon as the mistake is discovered; but all points scored before such discovery shall be reckoned."

Such oversights are rare, but not impossible in the tense atmosphere of a major match. Tennis historians still recall that four decades ago Helen Wills

On Slam by Gamble, 6-4

By JOSEPH DURSO

The New York Yankees, busily revieving their own history this summer, fired a few salutes to the past while winning, 6-4, in Yankee Stadium last

They gave a curtain call to Henry Aaron in his final appearance here with the Milwaukee Brewers. They cheered their own senior citizen, Roy White, who tripled for the 1,500th hit of his career. They even noted that it was the 420 birthday of Roger Maris, the last Yankee to win the home-run title.

But the noisiest salute of the evening was firedby one of the new mer-cenaries in Yankee uniforms, Oscar Gamble, who hit a grand-slam home run in the eighth inning that led a five-run rally and gave the Yankees the victory over the Brewers.

For the Yankees, who are expected to place tickets on sale for the American League playoff this weekend, the late outburst maintained their summer's momentum as they pursued their first pennant in 12 years. They now have won five straight games, 14 of their last 18 and 22 of their last 30— and even Catfish Hunter got a piece

Hunter Gets 15th

Catfish, who symbolizes the rich imports of the "new" Yankee era, had not won a ball game in 25 days. In fact, he had won only 14 games and lost 14 and gave every indication that he would finish the summer below 20 victories for the first time in six years. Even last night, he was trailing by 2-1 as the Yankees went to bat in the boutom of the eighth.

Then Mickey Rivers led off by outrunning a grounder to deep shortstop, and, playing for one run and a tie, White bunted him to second. When Thurman Munson followed with a shot inside first base, it looked as if the Yankees were up to their old tricks in the late innings. But George Scott made a dazzling, diving grab in the dirt and, sitting on the ground behind the bag, threw to the pitcher for the out.

The pitcher, Jim Slaton, now needed only one out to survive—but never got it. Chris Chambliss doubled to deep

The Nets completed the deal for Archibald, who grew up in the South Bronx and played at DeWitt Clinton High School, by signing Brian Taylor to a four-year, no-cut contract and then trading him to the Kings. The Kings also received Jim Eakins, a 6-11 backup center, and the Nets' 1977 and 1978 first-round draft choices. Taylor, 6-2, a backcourt man, played four seasons with the Nets after leaving Princeton following his junior year.
After approving his reported $750,000 contract, Taylor left for Green Bay, Wis. to watch his brother Bruce, a cornerback with the San Francisco 49ers, play against the Packers Sunday.

It cost the Knicks $200,000 to pry McMillian, one of the best "small" forwards, loose from the Braves, who are reducing their payroll. New York also picked up the two remaining years also picked up the two remaining years of a five-year contract McMillian had signed with the Lakers before they had traded him to the Braves in 1973 for Elmore Smith. While the Knicks were officially announcing the deal and introducing Mcannounced his 10th season with the Knicks would be his "final year." In speaking of McMillian, his eventual replacement, Bradley said, "I'm 33 years old and, looking at it from a personal standpoint, I don't have as much at stake. Realistically, Jim'is a cositive addition to the team and if I'm benched because he's made a starter, I'd be happy to give him a breather. "If you come off the beach with ex-perience, it helps the team more than a rookie would. I always thought a team had five men and more, and now I'm in a position to practice what I've been preaching for years. Jim is a real competitor. After playing against him for six seasons. I can't think of any player who is smarter and more unselfish than he is."

Bradley said he would consider politics or business after his retirement. McMillian Has Confidence

Bradley and McMillian have similar skills and played similar roles for their teams. Neither are one-on-one players and both play "textbook" basketball and work hard.

"I think I'll fit in well with Coach [Red] Holzman's team concept," said McMillian. "I know Bradley and I will be compatible because our styles are alike. Coming home again gives me a chance to play with some intelligent players again. I have always felt I can play the particular style offensively and defensively that the Knicks have." Eddie Donovan, the Knicks' general manager, has now obtained McMillian for the two teams that he has been as-sociated with. "Jimmy is the kind of player a junior high school coach would want to take his team to watch," said Donovan. "He epitomizes every coach's teaching." Donovan was the Braves' general manager when they bought McMillian.

Burns Leads; Nicklaus Fails To Make Cut

PINEHURST, N. C., Sept. 10 (AP)-Jack Nickiaus, a winner last week in the World Series of Golf, hit one shot into a woman's purse, missed the cut for the first time in six years and George Burns stormed into a two-stroke lead today in the rain-interrupted sec-ond round of the $200,000 World open golf tournament.

Nicklaus, the defender, and the pre-tourney favorite, failed to qualify for the final two rounds for the first time in 105 tournaments, stretching back to the Kaiser open in October of 1970. He had an erratic 74 and a 36-hole total of 146, four over par. He was two over for the tournament—a score good enough to quality for the last two rounds—but hit his second shot into a woman's purse on his 16th hole. He commented: "Now, that's a bad lie," bogeyed there and bogeyed the next hole from a bunker,

The string was broken, just short of Byron Nelson's record of 113. "It's been a long time," Nicklaus said. "I worked harder to make the cut here than I did to win $100,000 last week. I really did."

Burns Has Putting Touch

Burns, a long-time amateur star just completing his rookie year at the age of 27, broke out of a three-way tie for the top spot. He took a two-stroke lead with a three-under-par 68 and a 133 total, nine under par for two trips over the 7,007-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

"Another solid round, another good putting round," said the 216-pound Burns, a former Maryland football Burns, who let a chance slip away to win the Houston Open earlier this year, one-putted seven times. He has used only 53 strokes on the sloping, humpbacked greens in two rounds.

"I just haven't made any mistakes with my putter," he said, but added, "It's still early in the week." Two shots back of him was Hale Irwin, runner-up to Nicklaus last week

Rain Brings a Deluge Of Changes at Belmont

"My program looks like a Chinese crossword puzzle," said a bettor in Belmont Park's clubhouse yesterday as changes kept cropping up as the afternoon progressed.

The racing program, in fact, was a study in changes. A heavy At the rainfall just before the first race found the seven starters competing on a "wet-fast" surface. The track's condition was changed to "good" for the second race, "muddy" for the third and finally "sloppy" for the rest of the card.

The changing track caused trainers to scratch 10 horses. And, because the grass was considered too slippery for safety, all three turf events on the program were shortened and shifted to the main courses. There also were 10 jockey changes. In the eighth race, there were two made for Jacques Who, Angel Cordero, the original scheduled rider, being replaced first by Patrick Day and then by Eddie Maple.

should have brought my secretary." With the forecast for this afternoon calling for dry weather, few changes are expected on this afternoon's card. The program will feature the 87th running of the rich Futurity, for which 10 juveniles have been named. If 11 start, the seven-furlong event will be worth $119,255.

Mets Defeat Cardinals Behind Lolich, 4 to 3

By THOMAS ROGERS Special to The New York Times

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10-The Mets, who had scored 29 runs on 41 hits in a three-game sweep of the Cubs in Chicago earlier in the week, were hoping to keep up their torrid hitting tonight as they opened a three-game series against the Cardinals at Busch Memorial Stadium

The Mets scored their fourth straight victory, 4-3.

Mickey Lolich, who had not won a game since Aug. 8, was the starting pitcher for New York. In his last five starts, the portly left-hander had lost twice and three times had not been involved in the decision. He took a 7-12 won-lost record into the game.

Opposing him was John Denny, a 23-year-old right-hander who had topped the Mets four times in his two-year major league career, once this season. In June he shut cut New York on three hits, 3-0. He had won his last three decisions to run his record to 9-6. Boisclair Opens With Hit

Bruce Boisclair opened the game with a single to center field but was quickly doubled off first base on a liner by Mike Phillips to Garry Templeton, the shortstop. John Milner then cracked a single to right, the 16th hit in his last 32 times at bat, but Dave Kingman grounded out

The Cardinals also victims of a line-drive double play. Templeton singled with one out, but Lou Brock lined to Phillips, and the second baseman's throw to first doubled Templeton.

Singles by John Stearns in the sec-ord and Bud Harrelson in the third went to waste. Then the Mets posed a real threat in the fifth, Ed Kranepool led off with a single. After Steams had grounded out, Leo Foster walked, and Harrelson was hit by a pitch, filling the bases. Mike Tyson then made a lunging pickin of a grounder by I clich lunging pickup of a grounder by Lolich and started a rally-ending double play. The only hits that Lolich permitted through the first five innings were Templeton's single in the first and a single by Denny in the third. No Cardinai reached second base. But the Cardinals put together three hits in the sixth for the game's first

Denny got his second hit, a' bloop into center field. Jerry Mumphrey slapped a hard grounder that bounced off Foster's arm at third base for a double. Templeton lofted a short pop into left field that Harrelson attempted to catch with his back to the plate. But the ball popped ou of his glove, and Templeton was credited with a double, which scored Denny. Tolich double, which scored Denny. Lolich then afuned Brock and retired Ted Simmons on a grounder to avert further scoring.

The Mets bounced back with two runs to take the lead in the seventh. Kranepool opened with a single, and Pepe Mangual ran for him. Mangual stole second base on the second pitch to Stearns. The Met catcher than grounded to Tyson and beat the throw to first, where the ball went. past Denny for an error, allowing Mangual to score the tying run and Stearns to more to second

After Billy Baldwin, batting for Eoster, had struck out, Harrelson bounced a hit over second base. Tyson knocked the ball down, but, before he could recover it, Stearns had scored.

Lolich wasthen hit on his left elbow by a pitch and had to leave the game. He was taken by Dr. Stan London, the Cardinals' physician, to Jewish Hospital for X-rays.

Soccer Honors to Skyhawks

Ron Newman of the champion Los Angeles Skyhawks was named American Soccer League coach of the year and Jim Hinch the Skyhawks' forward, named the A.S.L's outstanding player yesterday. Both selections were made by the league's coaches, said Bob Cousy, the A.S.L. commissioner.

Phils Continue Their Slide As Cubs Post a 3-2 Triumph

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10 (UPI)—Rick Reuschel, who always seems to be at his best against Philadelphia, beat the Phillies for the ninth time in 10 career decisions tonight as the Chicago Cubs triumphed, 3-2. The loss was the Phillies' 12th in their last 14 games.

Chicago snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth when Joe Wallis singled, advanced on Mick Kelleher's ground out and scored on Rick Monday's single. Bill Madlock hit his 15th home run of the year in season, "that I almost like Donovan again." Then with a smile he added, "For a time, I couldn't forgive him for switching me from the warmth of Los Angeles to the cold of Buffalo."

One of Bradley's problems the last two seasons was that he had no one to set the "picks" as Willis Reed and Dave DeBusschere used to do for him that would make the way for jump

"Aithough there is a similarity in our playing styles," said McMillian. "I don't need the pick as much as he does. He came into the league with that situation and he got spoiled. I never had that luxury. I remember when I used to run into Dave DeBusschere's picks, and if I was lucky to get by him, I'd run into Willis Reed."

Archibald was granted his wish of finishing his playing career in New York with his trade to the Nets. Durpleasure with playing in Kansas City. the eighth for what proved to be the deciding run.

Philadelphia scored its second run in the eighth. Tim McCarver, a pinch-hitter, walked, took second on Dave Cash's single, moved to third on Larry Bowa's sacrifice and scored on Mike Schmidt's sacrifice fly. A single by Bowa and Schmidt's double had given the Phillies a 1-0 lead in the first; The Cubs evened the score in the second when George Mitterwald singled, moved to second on Manny Trillo's grounder and scored on a single by Wallis.

Jim Kaat pitched eight innings for the Phillies. He lost his 12th game in

Orioles 4, Indians 3

BALTIMORE, Sept. 10 (UPI)-Bob Grich singled in two runs and Ross Grimsley and Dyar Miller combined on an eight-hitter tonight in leading the Baltimore Orioles to a 4-3 triumph over the Cleveland Indians.

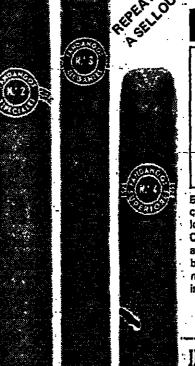

Grimsley pitched seven innings and gave up six hits in notching his seventh victory in his nine games. Miller took over in the eighth and allowed one hit in gaining his seventh save.

Consecutive singles by Reggie Jackson, Lee May and Ken Singleton gave the Orioles a 1-0 lead in the first. Grich hit his two-run single in the second after Andy Mora singled and Paul Blair doubled. Baltimore scored what proved to be the deciding run in the fourth when Mark Belanger singled, stole his 23d base and scored on an error

The Expos staked him to a 2-0 lead in the second off the loser, John Candelaria, with the help of run-scotling singles by Larry Parrish and Pete MacKanin. Montreal scored two more runs in the third off Candelaria with the help of a double by Pastish and a throwing error by Frank Taveras, the Cardinal shortstop.

Dorsett's Heisman Quest Will Not Be Solo Effort

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept.10-A lot of Pittsburgh linemen are going to fall and take their lumps trying to assist Tony Dorsett in his quest for the Heis-Trophy. But they apparently don't JAME it a bit. They feel they have a share in the action.

John Pelusi, Pittsburgh's senior cenfer, and Jim Corbett, the Panthers' tight end, are two of the men who must hit and fall if Dorsett is to become the outstanding college player of the season. They will start hitting tomorrow when Dorsett and Pitt open at Notre Dame.

·"I think it would be wonderful to say you blocked for the Heisman Trophy winner for two years," Pelusi -said. "It's a great feeling to look up -after you've gone down and see Hawk Dorsett going for a touchdown."

Corbett feels "it's not realistic for a lineman to think he'd win the Heisman. But to be on a team where the Heisman's at has got to be gratifying. 'ff he doesn't get it, I'd be as disappointed as Tony because I'd feel I let him

Obviously, Dorsett or Ricky Bell or any other runner can't do it alone. It's wise for a back to understand this.

Corbett said: "When Tony got the 303 yards against Notre Dame last season he had eight yards on the last run. He came into the huddle and said. 'It's yours, too.' He realizes he can't get 100 yards a game without us."

Corbett learned a lot of things in the Pitt huddle. He found out that Dorsett is getting better assistance these days. "I've been in that huddle for three years now and the players are getting bigger and bigger in that circle each year," he said. "And they're faster, too." Never before had a player done such damage to the pride of the Irish as T.D. did in Pitt's 34-20 victory last year. "It will not happen again." the Irish claimed. It probably won't happen tomorrow.

Dorsett said: "I heard Coach Dan Devine say I wouldn't get 300 yards against Notre Dame again. I think he's being very realistic. I'm not going out there expecting 300 yards. My goal this season is 100 yards a game and what-

At 100 yards a game Dorsett will easily set a National Collegiate Athletic Association career rusning record. At that pace he will become the first player ever to run more than 1,000 yards a season for four straight years. At 100 yards a game this tailback, who hits the middle as well as the outside. will probably win the Heisman Trophy. He enters this game with 4,134 yards in three seasons.

He must get off to a good start tomorrow. Running against' Notre Dame at Notre Dame is mighty difficult even if you are Tony Dorsett.

By midseason, defenses were stacked entirely against him. Bell personally gained twice as much ground rushing as the team did passing, and accounted for half his team's total offense.

Jumps to the six-level in response to Blackwood always promise a void, and did so here. It is not clear whether North was at the same time suggesting hearts as an alternative trump suit, or was simply showing two aces on the usual Blackwood principle.

The declarer was Phillip Martin of Garnerville, N. Y., and he had a difficult decision at the third trick in playing six spades. He captured the club king with the ace, throwing a heart from the dummy, and led a trump to the queen

Martin now considered cashing three diamond winners and the heart ace, and following with a cross-ruff. This would have succeeded if he had combined the plan with a heart finesse. He chose instead to lead the spade jack, and East could now have guaranteed the defeat of the contract by winning with the king and returning a trump.

But in such circumstances it is usually right for the defender to hold up his trump winner, and East did so. This gave the declarer a reprieve, and he

U.S. REJECTS A PLAN

New York City Hoped to Finance Construction of New Facilities by Selling Bonds to Builders

By GLENN FOWLER

The Federal Government has rejected a novel plan for New York City to finance construction of large sewage-treatment plants in Brooklyn and Staten Island by selling bonds to the contractors who successfully bid for the jobs,

The city had hoped the arrangement would permit the completion of a water pollution control plant at Oakwood Beach in Staten Island and the construction of similar plant in the Red Hook section of Brooklyn. The total estimated cost was $540 million, of which three-fourths was to be financed by Washington and the remaining cost was to be split between New York State and the city.

The projects would generate 7,000 jobs in the construction industry, which is badly depressed. Mayor Beame said yes terday as he disclosed the turndown by John R. Quaries Jr., deputy head of the Umited States Environmental Protection

The plan was devised because the city has no capital funds on hand and is pre-cluded from seiling bonds through normal channels because of the continuing fiscal crisis. Under the plan, contractors would agree to accept 10-year city bonds as partial payment for their work.

The city had hoped to get construction started by having the successful bidders buy $56.8 million worth of the bonds. The rest of the city's one-eighth share of the cost was to come from Federa and state reimbursement for engineering expenses already incurred. An alternative plan was to persuade 11 large commercia banks to buy the bonds and resell half of them to the low bidders on the contruction work.

In either case the contractors were to collect interest on the bonds but were to leave them in city custody in lieu of the customary "retainage," to guarantee completion of the projects.

Mr. Quarles objected on several points. One was his conclusion that bids would be inflated by contractors because of the risk of bond default by the city, and that 75 percent of any such increase would be borne by Washington under the costsharing formula.

Eric Kaston, an assistant to Mayor Beame, said the city disagreed with Mr. Quarles's reasoning. Contractors are desperate for work, he said, and bidding competition on major projects is fierce. Further delay in financing the projects, he contended, would cause more construction workers to leave the city.

I Lost 83 Pounds in Less Than 120 Days

Dear Reader:

Twenty-five years ago (5 years before I became a book publisher) I began to fatten up.

I became one of those overweight people who never stopped trying to reduce -- and never succeeded for long. I tried Weight Watchers and 1,200 calorie diets and Metrecal and even those daily shots in the buttocks. None of them worked for me. They all took off some weight and the weight always came back.

Nothing worked for long. I decided to face the fact that I would be fat for the rest of my life.

I had given up. Or almost. Last January, quite by accident, I read about some research being done at Harvard Medical School (among other places) and a new breakthrough approach to weight reduction. The findings were being put to practical use by Dr. Robert Linn in Broomall, Pa.

I phoned Dr. Linn. He said he would be opening an office in about two months. I couldn't wait. The next morning I drove 120 miles to see him. I began his program that My weight was 240 pounds when I began. Less than 120 days later, I weighed 157.

One result is that I feel wonderful. Better than I've felt in many years. My friends tell me I look better too. I'm thin again. I did it without pills or medication. I did it swiftly and safely.

THE LAST CHANCE DIET (--When everything else has failed) by Dr. Robert Linn will be published in October. Demand for this book has been so intense that we've already shipped 73,000 copies to the bookshops before publication! Your local bookseller should have copies now. Get one today. Dr. Linn's program changed my life. It could change yours....

If for any reason your bookseller can't supply you, you may order a copy directly from the publisher by sending $10 plus 50¢ for postage and handling. Address Dept: T-3, Lyle Stuart Inc. 120 Enterprise Avenue, Secaucus, N.J. 07094.

Military Honor

The continuing investigations of the cheating charges at West Point have raised questions about the manner in which the Military Academy's honor code is enforced. Defenders of West Point traditions are angered by any .. suggestion that the code's rigidity may have contributed to the moral as well as pedagogical confusion which in Tilm has led to the allegation of cheating by at least 200 filembers of last year's junior class.

In their rush to protect the code against all criticism, let alone modification, military conservatives and their civilian allies tend to speak of a soldier's honor as if it were a thing of absolute purity that sets the uniformed services apart from all other institutions.

Given the military's awesome responsibilities and powers, honesty and integrity are indeed essential qualities if its leaders are to be trusted with the vital mission of the nation's defense. But those qualities -cannot be guaranteed by so simple a device as a code that says "cadets will not lie, cheat, or steal nor tolerate those who do," without some more sophisticated guidelines. It is hard to believe that no cadets-and no senior öfficers-ever deviate from the absolute truth or that their peers instantly demand their dismissal if they dojust as it seems absurd to suggest that the cadets who allegedly discussed that now notorious take-home engineering test in their barracks were the first to have been guilty of such a borderline transgression.

American military honor, as an ideal and as a working model, might be better served if attention were focused more sharply on the questions of honorable behavior raised by different types of violations. For -example, the Marine Corps last week ended its investiga-"tion at San Diego of the fatal beating in the course of basic training of a mentally retarded recruit. Calling the case "a regrettable incident," the officers in charge of the inquiry closed the matter with mere reprimands of a colonel, two captains and a drill instructor.

On the face of it, there may seem to be no connection between the expulsion of cadets on dubious charges of cheating even as the investigation of the matter remains incomplete, and the reprimands of those who by their actions, default or training policies were directly or indirectly responsible for the death of that unfortunate recruit. There may nevertheless be some with an active interest in honorable military behavior who find it easier to accept a humane modification of the West Point thonor code than to view the San Diego verdict as compatible with military honor.

Thai Student Victory

- Life along the klongs, the charming odoriferous Wenice-like canals of Bangkok, undoubtedly exercises a whether it was this that brought the recent sudden return from Taiwan of the strongman of the military regime ousted by a student revolt in 1973, Field Marshal Praphas Charusathien. Nor is it likely, as he claimed when discovered, that he came for a medical checkup. There are better doctors elsewhere.

It is suspected, therefore, that the former police chief, interior minister and deputy prime minister returned for political purposes. His presence precipitated student demonstrations, angry parliamentary debate, and repeated Cabinet meetings of Prime Minister Seni Pramoj's coalition Government, which depends for its majority on three military-controlled political parties containing friends and former subordinates of Marshal Praphas.

"Five Cabinet ministers—all of them former generals called on the marshal and negotiated his departure. But with universities closed by student demonstrations and clashes with right-wing groups, which took two student lives and wounded more than 40, the schedule was accelerated. Marshal Praphas left for Taiwan as suddenly as he had come, escorted by two generals and others.

: The extraordinary incident has weakened further Mr. Seni's coalition Government—the third in less than two years of parliamentary rule-which has suffered from drift, division and indecisiveness. That this may have been the chief objective of Marshal Praphas's return was suspected by Mr. Seni, who warned of a possible "plot by some people to create confusion and jeopardize the stability of the Government." One theory is that right-Wing politicians may have been seeking to provoke chaos to force the army to take charge.

If that was the game, it clearly has boomeranged. Confronted with student determination to preserve Thailand's infant democrary, the current military leaders moved quickly to get Marshal Praphas out of the country and to liquidate the crisis. In so doing, they have given notice that they have no desire at this point to resume responsibility for governing the nation against student and left-wing opposition, which would guarantee further street clashes and bloodshed.

Peyser Over Buckley

"Whatever their political affiliations, New Yorkers are entitled to a choice between the best Senatorial candidates the respective parties can offer. We have already stated our preference for Daniel P. Moynihan in Tuesday's Democratic primary. On the Republican side our strong hope is that the nomination will go, not to Senator James L. Buckley, whose one term in office has been largely negative and undistinguished, but to Representative Peter A. Peyser. A moderate Republican, Mr. Peyser combed the country for support of this city in the days of its deepest trouble while Mr. Buckley was cheerfully prepared to see it go into bankruptcy. On such issues as mass transit. public education and consumer protection, especially in the price of food, he was as regularly to be found among those who voted for constructive legislation as Senator Buckley was to be found voting against it. Senator Buckley's feeble attempt to undermine

Once again New Yorkers are being called upon to judge the judges in the Democratic primary on Sept. 14 and later on Election Day. Many of the candidates have not sat on the bench; most of the names on the ballot will be wholly unfamiliar to voters.

Manhattan-Surrogate's Court

This sensitive office has been a center of patronage that favors politically connected lawyers and is a burden on the estates of decedents and their families. The Surrogate's Court urgently requires reform through state

Five candidates are running to replace retiring Surrogate S. Samuel DiFalco, They include: Supreme Court Justice Samuel A. Spiegel; Supreme Court Justice Alfred M. Ascione; Civil Court Judge Arthur E. Blyn; Civil Court Judge Stanley P. Danzig, and Marie M. Lambert, an attorney.

All the candidates are pledged to reform the practices in the Surrogate's Court.

The two best-qualified candidates are Samuel A. Spiegel, who has the Liberal Party endorsement, and Arthur E. Blyn, a respected jurist who shares a "preferred" Citizens Union rating with Justice Spiegel.

We recommend the election of Justice Spiegel because of his judicial temperament, experience and scholarship. He is one of the most highly regarded Supreme Court judges in the state, an able administrator, and has the ability to perform well in this specialized court.

Manhattan-Civil Court

In the First District, Stanley L. Sklar, an attorney, is opposed by John Picariello, chief adoption clerk of the Manhattan Surrogate's Court. Because of his broad experience in Civil Court litigation, we recommend Stanley L. Sklar.

In the Third District, Lester Evens, executive director of the Bedford-Stuyvesant Community Legal Services Corporation, is running against Beverly S. Cohen, a law assistant in the Civil Court. Lester Evens is preferred because of his extensive knowledge and trial practice.

In the Fourth District, Margaret Taylor, who teaches in the criminal law clinic at New York University School of Law, is opposed by Jack Turret, chief of the law division of the Manhattan Surrogate Court. Miss Taylor is preferred because of her litigation experience and

In the Seventh District, Herman Cahn, an attorney, is running against Alex Colgan, a law assistant in the Supreme Court, and Harry R. Pollak, an attorney, Because of his extensive practice in the Civil Court, we prefer Herman Cahn.

The Bronx-Civil Court

In this countywide contest, there are four candidates running for three vacancies. They include Burton G. Hecht, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the State Assembly; Martin B. Klein, an independent trial attorney; Harold Silverman, a criminal trial specialist, and Alexander E. Scheer, deputy chief of the Homicide Bureau in the Bronx District Attorney's office. We prefer Burton G. Hecht, Martin B. Klein and Harold

Brooklyn-Surrogate's Court

Three candidates are competing: Daniel Eisenberg, a specialist in the field of trusts and estates; Abraham Schulman, an able Civil Court judge, and Bernard M. Bloom, an open advocate of patronage. Because of his scholarship and ability, we recommend Daniel Eisenberg.

Brooklyn-Civil Court

For three countywide vacancies, eight candidates are competing: Martha Gibbell, a specialist in landlord and tenant law; Elliott Golden, Chief Assistant District Attorney of Kings County; Abraham Reingold, an arbitrator in the Small Claims Part of the Civil Court and adjunct professor at New York Law School; Bernard Fuchs, an attorney who has served in Small Claims; Stanley J. Glantz, law secretary in the Civil Court; Samuel W. Held, an attorney; Ruth Moskowitz, an attorney with Legal Aid Society experience, and Solomon A. Shapiro, an attorney.

We prefer Martha Gibbell, Elliott Golden and Abraham Reingold because of their requisite experience.

In the Fifth District, Barry Hurowitz, a Civil Court specialist, is opposed by Anthony Dallacas and Gabriel M. Krausman, attorneys. We prefer Mr. Hurowitz because of his extensive litigation background.

Queens-Civil Court

For three countywide vacancies, the candidates include: Benjamin Glass and Joscelyn E. Smith, both of whom have served as arbitrators in the Small Claims Part of the Civil Court; Joseph Rosenzweig, a trial attorney in the Civil Court, and Nicholas L. Pitaro, a private practitioner. We prefer Benjamin Glass, Joscelyn E. Smith and Joseph Rosenzweig.

Medicaid Surveillance and Control

'As one who has just returned from California to review, at the request of the state, "scandals of Medicaid," let me agree that the problems are nationwide and complex.

-Our unit took a team of ten clinicians to examine the quality of health care provided in one of the prepaid plans that the state has encouraged to care for Medi-Cal recipients on a capitation basis. The intent was to contain costs by paying nonprofit corporations a fixed annual amount per individual and hence discourage unnecessary services.

Unfortunately, these newer California programs have also fallen into disrepute, in large measure due to the failure of the state to place payments on any rational basis or to provide adequate administrative and professional standards and monitoring. The particular program we assessed was found to be providing an adequate level of medical care.

Yet this is only half the story. Large amounts of money are paid, and yet it is not known how many people get how many, or what kind of, services. -The inference is that only a small proportion of the eligible patients receive service and that exorbitant amounts of money are reverting to the plan's organizers. Furthermore, the legal intricacies of interlocking profit-making corporations obscure account-

I have read the William Serrin piece [Op-Ed Aug. 25] on the decline and fall of Detroit with a mixture of agreement, wonderment and even thorough amazement. The last half of the Serrin piece is peculiarly wrong, beyond the fact that it does say the blame goes past the black hoodiums and past

Mayor Young But the blame is not in lack of money for the school system. Today's Detroit hoodlums, given other conditions than prevail, would still be hoodlums if there were shiny school buildings, eager teachers and plenty of money-for buses or instruction tools, either one or all-on every integrated

The blame is not with the private neople. The piece says it's an old story that Detroit moneymen took their profits and ran to the suburbs. Henry Ford is cited. A curious distortion. The original Henry Ford first left Detroit in 1910. What flight is Serrin talking about? What has it to do with Detroit's 1976 woes?

And those merchants who have left Detroit? Hudson's has kept its downtown store open for a long, long time since it reportedly began losing money there. Some day it, too, may leave like the others - which quit because they were, every one, being drained of their lifeblood capital and lately ripped off by mushrooming shoplifting, burglary and holdups.

What of those besides Hudson's which remain downtown? And what of the present-day Henry Ford, who has gambled tens of millions of dollars of his own money and persuaded others to invest a hundred million or more to build Renaissance Center?

Detroit's court system is shot through with inability to cope with the city's problem of lawlessness-and this lies at the root of the difficulties besetting the city. Many of Detroit's judges take the endemic attitude of bleeding hearts—that society is at fault, not the defendant-and they free him from punishment. This is not the way to create respect for law. It is not the way to end gangsterism, even if Serrin ignores it.

Once the criminal courts of Detroit begin to enforce the law rationally instead of disdaining it, Detroit will have taken a long step on its hard STANLEY H. BRAMS road back. Publisher, Labor Trends Detroit, Aug. 26, 1976

DALLAS-Design and manufacturing know-how lie at the foundation of America's world position, both military and economic. The Soviet Union is richer in untapped resources, Europe has prolific scientists, and Asia has a billion workers. But in just 200 years we've outdistanced them all, through the peculiar genius of Americans to turn laboratory dreams into realities.

Yet today that mastery of design and manufacturing is being rapidly transferred to friendly nations, to nonaligned nations and to Warsaw Pact nations. It is being transferred to many nations that can use it to beat us in the international market place.

The threat is therefore twofold Exporting design and manufacturing know-how to potential enemies strengthens them militarily. And exporting that same know-how to potential economic competitors—friends or foes-strengthens them to compete against us for world markets. Yet we continue to transfer know-how by

Among the many mechanisms that transfer know-how to other nations, the most effective and therefore most hazardous ere those in which the donor organization is most active in teaching design and manufacturing techniques to the receiving organization. These active mechanisms include building "turn-key" factories for them, turing equipment. At the other end of the spectrum, passive mechanisms transfer very little know-how. Least hazardous, therefore, are trade exhibits, commercial literature and sales of products without accompanying design and manufacturing know-how.

The fear that high-technology equipment can be "reverse engineered" to divulge details and manufacturing belongs to an earlier era of simpler technology. Today, decisions to permit or deny export of finished products may be made largely on the basis of what capabilities those products themselves confer upon the receiving na-policy of decontrolling many products that have no military significance, applying screening criteria to control significant products by categories, but focusing thorough investigations on requests that threaten to transfer know-how.

Basic mechanisms to control the export of know-how do exist, but they need policy direction, modernizing and strengthening.

Export licenses must be denied in every case where design or manufacturing know-how or equipment would represent a revolutionary "quantumjump" advance to the receiving nation. Such advances not only allow the receiving country to draw abreast of the United States but also serve as the hasis for new advances that may surpass ours. Evaluations of the potential impact of proposed transfers are best made by knowledgeable current practitioners of the technology. During the last several years, much

In the 1970's, however, a few committee nations have begun to sell strategic know-how to Communist nations. And in other cases, know-how sold to nonaligned countries has been re-exported to Communist countries. The United States should influence its fellow committee members to return to their original objectives. The coordirating committee should be strengthened to insure effective enforcement of the committee agreement.

A new approach is long overdue. It must focus on critical items of direct military significance, plus vital design and manufacturing know-how, rather than on the end products of know-how. And beyond protecting what we have, we need to revitalize the creation of new know-how through aggressive research and development funding in industry.

Only in these ways, can we hope to protect the keys to America's military security and economic health.

CHICAGO-He is a different kind of

The compact, almost slight figure of Jimmy Carter emerges from the swirl of Secret Service agents and pushing, elbowing, camera-laden television technicians. He waves from a flat-bed truck or someone's front porch. The smile is immediately recognizable but the face seems unexpectedly large and, in serious repose as it most often is, its features are still unfamiliar. The voice is a small joit. Although the portable microphone. amplifies and harshens it, there are still the sudden descents into softness, the unusual phrasing, the Southern cadence and promunciation. Jimmy Carter is not your everyday politician in Brooklyn and Philadelphia, in Pittsburgh and Milwaukee.

Mr. Carter won primaries in New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Wisconsin but against a split field and relatively low turnouts. The primary successes are his good omens for November but if he is to realize their full promise, he must arouse the enthusiasm and bring to the polls in largenumbers those voters who find him "different" and a little puzzling. He must cease being a friendly stranger and be seen as their forceful champion. After a week of campaigning among them, Carter could be encouraged but not wholly sure that he is making that Historically, these are Al Smith Democrats. It was his campaign in 1928 that moved many of the parents and grandparents of today's voters in major cities of the East and the industralized Middle West to vote Democratic or to vote at all. The majority of them-Irish, Italians, Poles, Slovaks -have remained loyal to the party of Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt. Carter, having led the South back into the party after a generation of disaffection, knows that if he can relate successfully to these Northeast voters, the "Roosevelt coalition"-so often prematurely proclaimed dead-will be alive and himself invincible in the November election.

These are people who lead hard lives in the factories and steel mills and warehouses. Unions and Federal laws have made their workdays shorter and safer, but nothing can make them other than monotonous, physically tiring and often dirty.

They are people who work hardand for what? They have worked for the pension, to own the house, to live near the church and the social hall. In many ways, the mostly uninterrupted prosperity of the last thirty years has been good to them. But of late, diverse events have mocked or menaced their modest expectations.

Technological changes and financial mergers have left some older workers unemployed or deprived of a private. pension. Their houses are not worth what they once were because the neighborhood has begun to change its racial composition. Banks hasten and worsen change by "redlining" transitional neighborhoods. The younger people move away, imperiling the future of the church and the social

Many of these voters in the older cities of the Northeast feel that nobody listens to them, nobody cares a fourletter word about their problems. Some remain brass-collar Democrats; others oscillate between militancy on a particular issue and a generalizedwhat's the use?—apathy.

Jim King, the trip director of the Carter campaign, understands these people because he grew up in their ranks in Massachusetts. As the former head of Senator Edward Kennedy's Boston office, he has worked on their problems.

In planning Carter's itinerary, King has brought him to a once solidly Italian, now mixed, neighborhood in North Philadelphia, to a Polish stronghold in Pittsburgh, a Slovenian community center in Cleveland and so on. Presidential candidates have previously made raily appearances in ethnic neighborhoods, but King is trying for something more—a genuine human encounter. Carter makes walking tours, confers with neighborhood leaders and takes questions from the

Since Carter is trailed everywhere not only by his Secret Service staff but also by about 85 reporters and cameramen, it is difficult to attain the small scale and the intimacy that would make these encounters most effective.

"It's like making two dozen elephants pirouette at once," King observes genially. "It can be done -and other times it just doesn't work."

When it does come off, however, as it did on: "Polish Hill" in Pittsburgh the other day, it is a warming experience even for politics-hardened reporters. Carter walked the street chatting with a friendly parish priest and community leaders, made two speechesone to the adults and one to the parochial school children and their nunsposed for photographers with the middle-aged women who form a local basketball team, and finally pulled on as did several reporters—a shirt emblazoned with the Polish eagle and the words "Polish Power." Will Carter if elected make good on his promise not to forget the people and the problems of Polish Hill? Will those people place their trust in him? On their answer to the latter question may hinge the election.

For All

WELLESLEY, Mass. - The debate over the ... Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act has clouded the meaning of full employment. Most Americans have expressed in public opinion polls and by their response to employment offices and want ads, a continuing strong belief in the work ethic. They support the goal of full employment because they object to handouts or the dole or make-work or temporary jobs. But-to adhere to this work ethic means that jobs must be available so that everyone who is willing and able to work can find employment opportunity.

It is simple to translate this into legislation. Congress must amend the Employment Act of 1946, which commits the Federal Government .to promote maximum levels of employment, in order to mandate Federal policies for full employment.

Next, we must abandon the statistics we now use. Confusion has beset this country's economic policies for over twenty years because we have defined full employment in terms of unemployment. We have had a "target rate," an "interim rate," the "minimum acceptable rate"-measures that are faulty at best and deceptive at worst. The very notion of defining full employment as some level of unemployment is a basic, and unacceptable, contradiction in logic. --

If we want to provide work for everyone who is willing and able to work we need a new approach that has never been tried in this country. Let us take an inventory of labor supply.

We can count the number of people who would want work if jobs were available, and find out under what conditions of wages and hours and job requirements they would offer their services. We can define the potential labor supply in terms of people's skills and training.

(We do not know how many physicians, welders, librarians and boilermakers we have in the country: All our occupational data refer to people who are employed or seeking employment, not to those who could supply such skills.)

We can scrap the data on unemployment by race, sex and age, in fapor of listing workers' expertise, their mobility, their experience on the job, their flexibility and adaptability. We should identify potential workers by their relation to labor markets.

How many would be looking for work for the first time, on leaving school or in later years of their life?

'We can define the potential labor supply in terms of people's skills and training.

How many people want part-time work or intermittent employment "to fit their commitments as students or their lesser activities in retirement or simply the other pursuits in their lives? How many would leave retirement or household dulies or full-time schooling and how many would leave their present employer if other jobs were available? How many people would be ready and willing to work if they could relocate to another city or to another occupation?

Of course, the potential labor supply depends on wages and the availability of jobs as well as the availability of people. But that is why using unemployment to define full employment cannot succeed. In an expanding econnomy the number of people looking for work increases, and unemployment may remain high, even in a booming economy, simply because more people enter the job market. And when the economy is shrinking many people stop looking for jobs: Discouraged, they leave the market, and are no longer counted among those who are unemployed.

Of what use is an economic indicator that can show high unemployed ment in times of prosperity, or a depression reducing unemployment? Such a topsy-turvy measure cannot help economic policy-makers, nor provide much information to the general

But we could accurately measure both employment and unemployment by counting the potential labor supply and then the number of people actually at work. And we can ahandon the notion that a commitment to full end ployment requires supporting 3 percent, or 4 percent, or some other "magic number" for the unemployment rate.

Furthermore, once we know what conditions are needed to provide real jobs to actual people, we can start creating those conditions. We can design employment policies matching people with jobs, for an honest approach to full employment would be concerned with people who want an honest day's work, and with jobs for all the people who will work.

In acknowledging the contrast between the bishops' reactions to their conferences with the two Presidential campaign rivals, the Archbishop summed up the distinction as follows:

The specific difference is an unwillinguess, at this time, on the part of the Democratic candidate to support any kind of constitutional amendment and a willingness on the part of the Republican candidate to support an amendment." Ron Nessen, the White House press sec-

Acceptance of Concept

Archbishop Bernardin said that what was important was Mr. Ford's acceptance of the "concept" of a constitutional remedy to the Supreme Court's 1973 rulings that struck down state laws forbidding many abortions. In the two years after the ruling, the number of abortions performed annually more than doubled.

"You have to remember that this goes in steps, that a constitutional amendment does not come about overnight," the Archbishop said. "First of all, there has to be some support for the concept. There has to be some initiative in order to convince Congress that such an amendment should come into existence. After that you begin to talk abut the specific kind

It included a request for "clarification" of the form of constitutional amendment the President was "prepared to work for" and an expression of "deep concern over the substantial increase in the Federal Government's funding of

The Ulster County Department of Social Services is not unsympathetic to Woodstock's plight, but if the town doesn't pay, the county is prepared to increase its taxes in Woodstock to make up the difference.

Valerie Cadden, Town Supervisor of Woodstock, said:

"Home relief was intended to provide help for town residents with temporary problems. It's supposed to be for 90 days."

Mrs. Cadden said that of the 106 people on the town's home relief program this year, she had counted only six who she felt were genuine residents of Woodstock. Of the other 100 she said: "These people know how to manipulate the system, they're smart and they know how to beat it. They get on home relief and stay on it." For decades Woodstock had a reputation as a haven for artists, theater people, musicians, poets, writers and various kinds of craftsmen. "Sure, we've always had Bohemians here," said Constable Waterous, "but they didn't use to be on welfare."

"We have a work program—if you're getting home relief and are physically able you're supposed to do some work for the town," Mrs. Cadden said. "But these people get medical excuses. Or they just fail to show up.

"When we then close their cases, they apply for a 'fair hearing,' which they are entitled to under the law. But it takes 90 days for a fair hearing and in the meantime they're collecting $225 a month without doing any work. They also get food stamps and Medicaid from the county.

Tarzans of the Apes Meet Abe of City Hall

By EDWARD RANZAL

"You Tarzan, me Abe."

Thus spoke Mayor Beame yesterday as he looked up wistfully at two towering erstwhile movie Tarzans of another day, Johnny Weissmuller and Buster

The scene was a jungle-like gathering in City Hall's formal Blue Room, and the Mayor quickly returned to fiscal normalcy by telling "you two great Tarzans" that "I could benefit a little from you two experts because I've been swinging on a rope for the last year and a half."

He then let go with his political shaft: "I don't know your politics, but I hope you keep the elephants out of the city."

The Call of the Mile

The 72-year-old Mr. Weissmuller was persuaded to let loose his famous Tarzan call, which he popularized in his movie role in the 1930's. The Blue Room resounded with the resonance of the jungle cry, but neither elephants nor chimpanzees nor Jane or Boy bounded into the Blue Room. Mr. Weissmuller explained laughingly:

"I'm at the stage where I can only do about three yells a day.' Mayor Beame, however, was im-pressed and he told Mr. Weissmuller If I had that kind of a call I would have chased out of the city all those fellows who shouldn't be here.' The occasion was to mark the elec-

A plea to voters not to misjudge Jimmy Carter because of his region, accent or religion was made by Senator Mondale in a speech at Notre Dame. He said that John F. Kennedy had been suspect to many voters for those reasons during the 1960 campaign. [1:1.]

Women are still regarded by some as curiosities in the church despite commitments made to women's equality by almost all major denominations. Cheating on the new lottery has been done by at least three vendors who discovered a way to detect winning $2 and $5 tickets, the New York State lottery's director said. The vendors found that by tampering with a ticket they could uncover a secret code before the tickets were sold. The director, John D. Quinn, said he had no plans to withdraw tickets, and he warned the public to look for tickets that had a scratch between the numbers and to re-fuse to purchase them. [1:4.]

HELEN R. BRYAN, 82, Dalton Trumbo, Film Writer, Dies; DR. WALTER RIESE, 86, SPECIALIST ON THE BRAIN OF REFUGEE GROUP Oscar Winner Had Been Blacklisted

By JON NORDHEIMER

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.— Dalton Trumbo, the Hollywood screen writer who was perhaps the most famous mem-ber of the blacklisted film industry authors called "the Hollywood Ten," of a heart attack early today at his home here. He was 70 years old.

Mr. Trumbo, who was awarded an Oscar for a screenplay written under a pseudonym during his years of forced exile from work in films, underwent sur-exile from work in films, innerwent sur-gery for lung cancer in 1973.

Although he served one year in Federal prison for his refusal to provide the House Un-American Activities Committee with any information about his political leanings in 1947, he was able in later years to recall with sardonic humor his Communist association "I joined the Communist Party in 1943 and left it in 1948 on the ground that in the future I should be far too busy to attend its meetings, which were, in any event, duli beyond description, about anything other than something to get out of," he remarked at another time. A Ginger Rogers Film

One of Mr. Trumbo's movies that drew suspicious examination by the House committee was "Tender Comrade," which starred Ginger Rogers, who had won ar willed secretary in his earlier success. "Kitty Foyle."

When "Tender Comrade" was released in 1943, it was regarded as a sentimentally innocuous story of a worker in a war plant sourageously struggling while her husband was off fighting. By 1947. with the Cold War at its height, nuance. were seen in single words such as "com rade" and in bits of dialogue.

That year, the tearful mother of Ginge Rogers told the committee that her daug. ter had been forced to utter the "Com munist line" in the film: "Share are share alike—that's democracy." A Highly Paid Writer

The only member of the Hollywood Ten to come from a working-class back-ground, Mr. Trumbo, until his blacklisting, had been one of the highest-paid screen writers in the film capital, earning as much as $4,000 a week while assigned to a script.

His screen credits in the preblacklisting era include "Kitty Foyle," "A Guy Named Joe" and "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo." He was also the author of the 1939 war novel "Johnny Got His Gun," which won the National Book Award that year and which Mr. Trumbo later worked into a screenplay for the 1971 film of the same name. The film was awarded the international Critics Award at the Cannes Film

His screenplay credits after the 13-year blacklist was broken by a Hollywood largely shamed by the hysteria associated with the search for Communists during the late 1940's and early 1950's include:
"Spartacus." "Exodus," "Lonely Are the Brave," "The Sandpiper," "Hawaii,"
"Papillon" and "The Fixer."

But, unlike some other members of the Hollywood Ten, Mr. Trumbo kept active, and maintained his equilibrium during those trying years, even finding some humor in the time he spent in the Federal prison in Ashland, Ky., for refusing to cooperate with the investigators of the Un-American Activities Committee.

"It was a place of quality," Mr. Trumbo later said of the correctional facility at Ashland, "as evidenced by the fact that he head librarian was a Congressman here for a felony called taking a bribe, thereas I was there for a misdemeanor alled contempt of Congress. In later years, he also delighted in recounting the fact that one of his Congressic nal inquisitors, J. Parnell Thomas, who was convicted of defrauding the Government, had served a sentence at a prison with two other members of the Holly

Mr. Trumbo briefly rejoined the Com munist Party during the blacklist in 1954 as a gesture of support for 14 Communis officials in California convicted under the Smith Act, but severed his ties again after these convictions were reversed and the defendants freed.

Oscar for a Pseudonym

In 1957, the Academy Award for best creenplay went to Robert Rich, the name isted on the credits of the film "The Brave One," but it was discovered, much to the embarrassment of some in the in-dustry who still feared political reprisals, that Mr. Rich was, in fact, Mr. Trumbo, working under one of many names he used to sell his work. The Oscar was finally presented to Mr. Trumbo last year. Charged With the Abduction, Rape and Murder of College Student in Bergen County

> By RONALD SULLIVAN. Special to The New York Types

RIVER VALE, N.J., Sept. 10-A 16-yearold youth was arrested today at his home in this Bergen County suburb and charged with the abduction, rape and murder of Kim Montelaro, a 20-year-old college stu-dent from New Milford whose body was discovered in a secluded field in nearby Washington Township last week.

According to the police, the victim was kidnapped while shopping on Aug. 31 at the Paramus Park shopping mall, driven in her own car to Washington Township, and raped there and stabled to death with a seven-inch hunting knife.

The Bergen County Prosecutor, Joseph W. Woodcock Jr., said in Hackensack, that the youth's identity would not be dis-closed because he was a juvenile, but that he intended to press for the suspect's prosecution as an adult.

Mr. Woodcock said that the "break in the case" had come with the discovery of a hunting knife sheath two days ago in the field where the victim had been

Early this week, the Monmouth County police arrested a Howell Township man in the rape and stabbing murder of a young woman in that community.

Judge Moves Rubin Carter Trial After Citing 'Prejudicial Publicity'

A defense request to move the trial to Newark in Essex County was rejected by Judge Joelson. He described coverage of the Carter-Artis case in The Newark Star-Ledger as "orchestrated largely in favor of the defendants."

Judge Joelson said that reporting in the Hudson County press had been "balanced and unimpassioned." He also noted that Hudson County's black population of about 10 percent was comparable to Passaic County's.

Mr. Carter, a former boxer, and Mr. Artis, both blacks, are accused of killing three whites in a 1966 case that the Paterson police said had racial aspects.

Burrell I. Humphreys, the County Prosecutor, who had opposed the change of venue request by the defense, said he might appeal the ruling. Mr. Humphreys contended that newspaper and television coverage outside Passaic County had been largely biased in favor of the de-fense.

Witness Alleges Pressures

The witness who said that he had been pressured by the Prosecutor's office is Arthur D. Bradley, whose recantation helped win a new trial for Mr. Carter and Mr. Artis.

More Funds for Prosecutor

The Prosecutor confirmed that his office had obtained an additional $70,000 allocation last month to its $1.9 million budget from the county. He refused to say how the money was being spent.

Members of Mr. Humphreys's staff have said privately that most of the $70,000 was being used to reinvestigate the Carter-Artis case.

Mr. Humphreys's office has opposed requests for public funds to help defense lawyers in their investigations.

Members of the Prosecutor's staff, who asked for anonymity, asserted that there was "some unhappiness" in the office be-cause of the supposedly heavy concentra-tion of personnel and time on the retrial of Mr. Carter and Mr. Artis, scheduled to start on Oct. 12.

Morale Problem Denied

Mr. Humphreys, in a rare move, has personally been representing the prosecu-tion at long pretrial hearings. He is also expected to participate in the trial—the first time he has done so since he took office in June 1975.

The mystery began developing last Sunday morning when a month-old, artificially bred black and white heifer was stolen from a barn at Poverty Hollow Farm in Newtown, Coan. The farm's owner is Dan W. Late Monday afternoon, one of them, Michael Oczkowski, 22, of Seymour, Conn., was apprehended in the woods and charged with the murder.

Officially, the police say that the stabbing had followed an apparent argument over a girl. But local papers around Newtown are full of rumors that those at the cabin where the calf's remains were found were engaged in a ritual of some sort. The police and Mr. Lufkin's farm refuse any comment on that speculation.

But one policeman with knowledge of the investigation did not dispute "There's a lot more to it than can be divulged now," the officer said. "When this breaks, it's going to be

Dazed Woman Identified

An elderly unknown woman, apparently a victim of amnesia, who was hospitalized 16 days ago after being found dazed on a midtown sidewalk was identified by the police last night as Mildred Erickson, a woman in her 70's with few friends and no close relatives. Missing-persons detectives, who had pursued more than 300 fruitless leads in the case, said that the identification had been provided by Mary Erickson, a 64-year-old Bronx widow who is a sister-in-law of Miss Erickson but who had not seen her for

The sister-in-law said Miss Erickson had lived for 15 years at the Tudor Hotel, 304 East 42d Street, but had given up her room several weeks ago after losing a long-held clerical job. A hotel employee recalled Miss Erickson as a "loner." She was summering from malnutrition and apparent amnesia when found outside a Chock Full o'Nuts restaurant at 39th Street and Broadway on Aug. 26 and was taken to St. Clare's Hospital. The police said an anonymous Supermarket Produce: A Search for Freshme the season that offers the greatest variety of locally grown products at their peak of perfection. Yet after four weeks of study the produce departments of 45 supermarkets in Queens, Riverdale and Manhattan—representative of the 1,500 to 2,000 such stores that exist in the city good fruits and vegetables in most of these stores, even at this bountful grason, is chancy to say the least.

Compared with the variety of sparkling produce displayed by the city's top independent greengrocers, supermarkets, with only a few notable exceptions, present a dismal picture, only slightly less so than it might be in

Some of the reasons for the differences between supermarket and spe-cialty-store produce were explained by William Forsberg, the director of grocery merchandsing for the A. & P.

"Specialty stores can take better care of things like cheese, fish, meat, fruits and vegetables than we can," he said. and vegetables than we can," he said. "An independent store owner picks exactly what he needs each day and has little waste. He also handles it himself, or directly supervises others who do so, and so he has little damage."

"Supermarkets buy in huge carloads and we warehouse produce and then send it out to our stores, which means extra time and extra handling. And then, although we try to train our per-sonnel and check up on them, some managers and clerks are just better than others."

Other Executives Disagree

While several produce wholesalers in the Hunts Point market shared this opinion, executives of other chains—Sloan's, Daitch-Shopwell, Gristede's, D'Agostino, Pathmark and Grand Union—disagreed. All insisted they bought quality comparable to that of the most deluxe greengrocers, saying also that they sold uniformly below luxury market prices. In addition, all said their methods of handling produce were ex-cellent, acknowledging however, that there was an inevitable difference from store to store.

Yet my observations and complaints of food-oriented acquaintances and readers indicate that there is much to dispute the supermarket executives

Supermarket produce selections are inferior in variety and quality, and assertions that they are always better

Lack of variety is the supermarket shortcoming easiest to understand and, perhaps, the least serious. In the city, the supermarkets are kept as small as possible, and the resultant proportionate, space for produce is that much less. Managers, therefore, concentrate on those items that sell best and try to stay away from the very expensive, highly perishable specialties. Whatever variety of fruits and vegetables does exist is probably due to the consumers increased interest in different vegetables and their disaf-

Quality is far more discouraging.

In Manhattan alone, the consistently best Manhattan alone, the consistently best supermarket produce was found at Sloan's, superior more for fruit than for vegetables. But in the entire area, the two best chains were Waldbaum's and Pathmark, both able to offer the widest variety, the best quality and lowest prices because, except for one Pathmark in Inwood, neither has stores in Manhattan, and expenses in the other boroughs and the suburbs are lower.

And when John Mintz, vice president in charge of produce for Grand Union, insisted that all of his stores had the same quality, and that whichever store I went into could be regarded as typical, he couldn't have been more thought the neighborhood offered the best of everything, but we are deprived when it comes to fruits and vegetables. The specialty markets, such as Empire across the street, have nice things, but their prices are terrific."

This opinion was repeated by shoppers in a number of markets I visited and with excellent reason. For one thing, produce departments in these stores generally look terrible because of the state of their greens; there are limp, browning lettuce, faded parsley, wilted, bagged spinach, rotting bean sprouts, and drooping celery.

Because cierks do not rotate merchandise and weed out what is spoiling, the selection looks anything but

Quality of produce depends on two main factors—the merchandise that is main factors—the merchandise that is purchased in the first place, and the way it is stored and handled afterward. Judging by the labels and grades of quality I saw when supermarkets did have fresh merchandise, their main problem is in the handling. How to get a long line of employees to nurture produce with the seven diligence are produce with the same diligence exercised in a family-run store where poppa is watching is truly a problem in numan motivation.

Yet with all of the drawbacks, it is obviously possible for a better job to be done, because there are stores. doing it. Quality does vary greatly not inspections was in the Grand Union on West Broadway in Washington Square Village. However, the single worst supermarket produce department I saw was also a Grand Union, this one on Broadway near Verveleen Place in Riverdale.

Other Grand Unions offered selections ranging from poor to good. A. & P., Daitch, D'Agostino and International, also varying from store to store, were the poorest over all. Gristede supermarkets were a cut or two better, but it must be noted that Gristede service stores, such as Nicola's in the Village, offer the worst value in town. Their fruit and produce were obviously top grade when purchased, but were consistently badly handled, and such stores have a lower turnover than supermarkets, which is an added disadvantage. Nevertheless, prices at these stores are the same as or more than those in luxury specialty stores.

Price is by far the most difficult and confusing area in which to make comparisons. The assertion of supermarket executives that they are competitive with each other in price proved to be true if taken on an average: No one chain can afford to be the lowest on everything, and working on the old merchandising principle that what is lost on apples is made up on oranges, they do exactly that.
Wholesale produce prices are deter-vice in government, not one American in a thousand can have heard of him or even of the joint committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. But Larry as he was almost always called by the House and Schate members - in some ways was the dominant figure of the

He was asked to propose numerous compromises when the conferees could not find a way out of an impasse. Sometimes he volunteered compromises even before they were asked for. On a few occasions he made known his view that one provision or another was bad tax law.

Mr. Woodworth was invariably deferential. He was uncanny in knowing when to speak up and when not to. And above all, he knew everything. "What does this mean, Larry?" was a question that must have been asked a hundred times.

The division of time. The conferees, as matters turned out, spent more time on many little things with almost no revenue impact than on major issues such as child care deductions affecting such as child care deductions affecting millions of people and hundreds of millions of dollars.

They were bedeviled by such perplexing issues as how to tax fishermen and how baby-sitting services should be treated (as employers, as an independent business, as employees?) and deductions allowable for business and professional conventions in foreign countries. It took four separate discussions on four days to resolve an obscure issue of whether tax-free revenue bonds could be issued to build private hospitals; an issue of principle was involved and the House conferees stood fast and finally got the whole provision

Strange Bedfellows. There is not much philosophical affinity between Mr. Vanik and Representative Barber B. Conable Jr., Republican of Alexander, N.Y. Mr. Conable, for example, worries about "capital formation"—a potential lack of investment, inadequate corporate profits and the like. Vanik thinks corporations are taxed far too little.

Yet these two were frequently together against Senate provisions that would erode the revenues. Mr. Conable objected to a host of little things, and sometimes he won. Mr. Vanik won in many cases too—for example, in making sure a new provision giving tax relief to cattle raisers forced to sell some of their herds because of drought would be limited to actual farmers.

The influence of the New Congressional Budget Process. While the tax-writing committees, and tax bill conferess, have not on the whole been "irresponsible," in the past, the easiest course has often been to reduce taxes rather than preserve or raise them. This conference was dominated by the revenue floor adopted as part of the new budget process to hold down the deficit, and the resulting need of the conferees to produce a respectable net revenue gain for all the hundreds of provisions taken together. Potential tax losses of nearly $1 billion were thrown out for this reason, and numerous compromises were resolved on the side of all matters.

On the major question of the merits of open conference committees, it seems doubtful that the tax conferees. at least, will return to the old system of settling things behind closed doors.

"The new way is better," Mr. Conable said in an interview, "though I wasn't sure at first that it would be. The attendance was better. Bad provisions could be exposed and defeated more could be exposed and deteated more readily. There was more focus on the subject. The lobbyists were there growling, but they were not allowed to pass us slips of paper all the time. "Sure, there was some posturing. But not too much."

The second is to borrow-to make purchases and pay off the balance over a period of months, all the while accruing interest on the unpaid portion. Until recently, the first way was entirely free at nearly all banks. If you paid your monthly credit card bill within the grace period specified on the monthly statement, there was no charge for the convenience. Usually, the grace period amounted to about 25 days.

The banks were content with this arrangement, because they earned interest on those occasions when you allowed the balance to remain unpaid, or rolled it over into the next monthly billing period. Moreover, they expected the credit card to provide them with an "entree" to you for other profitable banking services—for example, automobile loans or home improvement

This means that if the balance is rolled over into the next month, there will be no free ride on any purchases made in the meantime. If you pay off your account within the grace period, you still incur no finance charges. Including the grace period and the period between a purchase and the billing date, your free ride might amount to 45 days or more but not if you fail to pay your balance in full by the due date.

About a year ago, Citibank adopted a similar system, whereby the clock starts running for interest charges as

Reuss Opposes Slowdown

Representative Henry S. Reuss, chairman of the House Banking Committee, said in Washington yesterday that the United States should not accept proposals that would result in a "slowdown" of gold sales by the International Monetary Fund.

Wisconsin Democrat commented on the matter after reports from Copen-hagen where all nine members of the European Economic Community unanimously agreed to seek a change in the I.M.F.'s gold auction techniques. Under previously agreed upon arrangements the I.M.F. had planned to sell 25 million ounces of its gold at market-related prices over a four-year period.

Representative Reuss, said it would "make no sense" for the United States to yield to the "gold bugs" and agree to a slowdown of the I.M.F. gold auctions.

conditional upon implementation of an "interim" price-support program within 10 days to relieve peanut farmers who have been harvesting their crop for more than three weeks in some areas. The growers had been unable to get the support loans they ordinarily depend upon.

Metal-Casting Process Uses Vapors

By STACY V. JONES

WASHINGTON Sept. 10-The molding and die casting of high melting point steel and many other metals are expected to be improved by a new method of lubrication—the use of vapors, rather than liquids—so that the castings can be easily removed from the forms.

Inventors of the process are Prof. Elmer E. Klaus, a chemical engineer, and Chun W. Lai, a former graduate student, at Pennsylvania State Univer-

As described in Patent 3,978,908, granted this week the process greatly reduces fire and pollution hazards common with the oils and other liquids now used to lubricate mold and die surfaces to promote shearing between them and the cast metal.

The vaporous lubricants are formed by passing a carrier gas, such as nitro-gen or carbon dioxide, through a reservoir containing an organic liquid, typi-cally a phosphorous compound. Inject-ed into a hot mold or onto the intricate ed into a not most of other the intrate surfaces of a closed die, the vaporous lubricants decompose, leaving a thin, uniform, easily sheared coating.

Besides high melting point metals, the invention is generally useful with steels, aluminum, magnesium, zinc and many aluminum, magnesium, zinc and many alloys.

Aside from averting the pollution and fire hazards that arise when hot tools are sprayed with oil, the vaporous lubricants extend the life of molds and dies by reducing the metal fatigue that results when the tools are repeatedly shock-cooled with conventional lubri-

Surveillance Device

Rocket-powered equipment for ob-taining information inside enemy territory and transmitting it by radio has been invented for the the United States Army. James F. MacAdam, an electronics engineer at the Army's Electronic Warfare Laboratory, Mountain View, Calif., obtained Patent 3,979,086, for the rocketed data communication system this week. -

The device consists of two connected sections, called a rocket module and a surface module. The combination is dropped from the air or otherwise placed where it is to gather information. Sensors within the surface module pick up information from speech or other sources, and it is recorded inside the rocket module.

Upon command from a station, or after predetermined time set by an electronic clock, the rocket section is launched to a mederate height. When it reaches a point permitting line-ofsight transmission to the station, the recorded data are sent to the station's receiver.

The data may consist of voice or radio communications or signals of other kinds indicating the presence and activities of enemy personnel and vehicles, and their timing. The patent says the rocket module may further include an explosive self destruction for use when it has completed transmitting all the important information.

Demand Regulator For Admitting Oxygen

A demand regulator for admitting oxygen into emergency breathing systems and resuscitators, which was patented this week, is to be incorporated in an escape device for mining use.

way. He holds 28 other patents, mostly on gas controls.

The company regards the new regulator trademarked LIF, as an important addition to its line of portable emergen-cy oxygen devices. The diaphragm is open to the atmosphere on one side and communicates with the breaking system on the other. A tilt valve allows a high oxygen inflow with little breathing effort. The unit can be used in atmosphere that is totally oxygen-defi-

The patented regulator weighs only four ounces, and the back pack of which it is to form a part will weigh 12 pounds, including tanks and breath-ing mask. The cost of the mine-escape device will be about $400, which Mr. Mills calls relatively low.

The inventor is also working on a new respirator to be used in reviving persons whose breathing has stopped.

tional snafus cause minor delays and air traffic seems to be lagging behind original expectations. "It's going better than we thought," maintained Rubin Ginzberg, Mirabel's manager and a former Government regional director of telecommunications who had never run an airport before. "However," he acknowledged, "we're still taking out bugs."

A mammoth project both fiscall and geographically, Mirabel-designed to provide for eastern Canada's international air traffic needs well into the 21st century—has already cost $325 million to build, plus $140 million for land acquisition, about double the original estimates.

By the time an anticipated third stage is completed in 2025, Mirabel could wind up as one of the costlest public works projects in Canada's history.

It is also one of the most innovative. For the airport, authorities took not only a 17,000-acre tract for operations but also 71,000 surrounding acres to keep the airport forever insulated from encreaching development.
Insulated From the Public

"Plus qu'un aéroport—more than an airport," say the French and English posters and brochures that depict rushing waterfalls and quaint country vil-lages with the huge enclave. But this deliberate environmental planning has also insulated Mirabel from the flying Mirabel uses the "remote gate system" which docks the planes on the tarmac away from the terminal and transports travelers back and forth in bus-like passenger transfer vehicles, or PTV's. By eliminating the need for plane-docking areas along the terminal, the system does away with long treks down terminal corridors.

"I get a lot of good comments about no walking distance," said Pierre Lacombe passenger service supervisor for Air Canada. "It's very functional," agreed one of his agents. "No problem, very easy," said Grete

Hallen from Sweden, en route home with her husband, Dan. "Okay, but a little cold and big, same as Charles de Gaulle" airport said

The airy terminal architecture at Mirabel international airport outside Montreal

André Neron, shrugging, while waiting on line to check in for a flight back nome to Pans.

However, several airline representatives complained about periodic jams at security counters. "It's bad," said Swissair's representative while CP Air's added that "they still haven't found home to Paris. a way to perfect their security."

Similarly, bugs in the PTV's conspired with Montreal's fierce snows several times last winter to immobilize a number of the vehicles. The precedent was embarrassingly set last fall when a PTV carrying dozens of airline officials malfunctioned in the middle of the gala airport dedication ceremonies.

However, Mr. Ginzberg said that the roblems had since been overcome. Moreover, Mirabel stood up well under the Olympic onslaught this sum-mer. On its peak day so far, July 15, the airport handled 152 flights involving 13,153 passengers.

In fact, if anything, the problem seems to be not too much traffic but not enough. With unofficial figures showing that 1.5 million passengers passed through Mirabel between January and July, it seems unlikely that the airport will meet its three million firstyear projection.

To some extent, it appears, travelers may be making an effort to route themselves through the more accessible Dorval or even Toronto's airport, if possi-ble, to avoid the drive to and from Mirabel.

Some Political Implications

Generally, however, there is little choice, since Mirabel handles all overseas flights for the Montreal area and Dorval remains reserved for domestic and trans-border air traffic.

However, with French-speaking
Montrealers and other Quebec residents increasingly strident in demands for cultural recognition or separatism, the airport issue has taken on some political implications. Whether for this reason or others, the Government, which had not planned to shift trans-border air traffic to Mirabel until 1980, is now reportedly seeking to route more flights through the giant new facility.

Meanwhile, the Government and Mirabel seem to have come to terms with one major group of critics-the area's dislocated farmers. A bitter controversy over land compensation that sent protest demonstrators marching to the airport dedication last fall has been soothed away by generous payments and more local consultation. We have to live with the airport and the future," said Msgr. Bernard Hubert in the Roman Catholic cathedral in St. Jerome, a municipality of 50,000 bordering Mirabel.

"St. Jérôme has always been a poor city," he said. "Maybe now it can become a city of services."

"Besides," he reflected, "if there wasn't an airport here, the people from Montreal would be coming here in five years to build houses."

In making these sales, Mr. Knudsen explained, "the company will use the proceeds for reducing debt and increasing its working capital consistent with the terms of its existing agreements with lenders. This, together with any further sales that may be made, will permit White Motor to further strengthen its financial condition and provide funds for meeting the in-creasing demand for its products."

The truck market is recovering from the 1975 downturn and a stronger market is looked for in 1977," Mr. Knudsen said, adding that the farm equipment industry was good but construction remained soft.

French Renew Glass Injunction

PARIS, Sept. 10 (Reuters)—The French Monopoly Commission has renewed an April 1968 injunction aimed at putting a stop to certain anticompetitive practices among glass container manufacturers, the Government's official prices journal said. The commission has noted that two companies Saint Cabain and that two companies, Saint-Gobain and BSN-Gervais-Danone, last year accounted for 84 percent of French glass container production in terms of tonnage.

States will prove to be more widely accepted overseas if they bear the same name as overseas cards. So Visa it will be. The word is recognized in all languages, because of its connection with passports and border-crossing.

Another possibility, unconfirmed by National BankAmericard, the organization behind the card in this country, is that the word "America" on a credit card could inspire unfavorable reactions in some parts of the world, whereas "visa" is entirely neutral.

The Bank of America in San Francisco owns the BankAmericard name and licenses it to National BankAmericard Inc. in this country and to Ibanco overseas. Both are independent of the big California bank. After the change, the BankAmericard name will revert to the Bank of America, which may decide to abandon it or use it for a different type of service.

Most Widely Used Card Is Still Master Charge

Master Charge is still the most wide ly used bank credit card, although BankAmericard is closing the gap. At the end of the first quarter of this year, Master Charge listed 7,483 participating banks, compared with 7,058 for its competitor. It also listed 37.4 million cardholders, compared with BankAmericard's 31.8 million.

In terms of retail outlets, however, BankAmericard has passed Master Charge, with 1,239,824 at the end of the first quarter, a shade ahead of Master Charge's 1,239,119. In terms of gross dollar volume, Master Charge did $2.88 billion in the first quarter. compared with BankAmericard's $2.35 billion. Both cards experienced strong growth over the first quarter of 1975, in terms of the number of participating banks, merchant outlets, cardholders, dollar volume and overall measures of activity. Both card systems listed sub-stantially lower delinquency rates.

the ordination of women in the Episcopal Church, now beginning also among Roman Catholics, has helped draw attention; to the issue in Protestant churches, most of which now ordain women. Attitudes seem to be changing, but slowly.

Complicating the situation is a generally tight job market. "With the increase." emoliment of women in seminaries comes the question, 'What are we going to do with them?" observes Burnice Fjellman of the National Council of Churches' commission on women in ministry. "In many cases there is innuendo—the blame for the oversupply seems to be on the

"As a Presbyterian, I think the situation is bleaker," says the Rev. Barbara Roche, discussing the job outlook for women in her financially pressed denomination.

Miss Roche, who is director of student services at the Pacific School of Religion.

"It's more sunny for the Methodists— they haven't suffered as much financially and are seriously committed to placing women," said Miss Roche. In that denomination, appointments are made by a bishop rather than by the local parish, where much of the resistance to women ministers rests.

Among Baptists, "the resistance is terrible," Miss Roche reported, and seminary graduates who are Lutherans "are pio neers—it's going 10 be rough.'

Most of the increased seminary enrollments and the denominational studies of women's role in the church have had some impact in the last five or six years. "The big difference is in women's per-ception of themselves as professionals," says the Rev. Dr. Barbara Zikmund, who teaches at the Chicago Theological Seminary. 'They are openly saying, 'I want to be a pastor. I like to preach."

Some continue to seek the roles sough: by women seminarians earlier—in counseling, campus ministry and rs hospital chapiains, for example—or outside the institutional church in, say, w:man's a United Church of Christ minister has found that most of the prejudice against women is based on ignorance, "They've never seen a woman in the pulpit or a woman serving communion," she said. "They can't imagine you in the role. But when they see it works, the resistance quickly fades."

Miss Suzedell, who will soon take a new position in Greenwich, Conn., felt better about job hunting the second time than she did the first.

A woman graduate fresh out of a semi-nary, she explained, tends to be defensive and angry when interviewers ask irrelevant questions they would not ask of a man. Now, she says, "I tend to be more composed about the basis for some of these questions. The less defensive you rick are, the more you can try fear behind the questions they're asking." are implemented." The town asked for more control over determination of eligibility for the program, reform of the fair hearing process, additional funds to cover the cost of the equipment for the work programs and more help from state and county employment services.

A large part of the problem is that Woodstock is in an economically depressed area. County unemployment in July was at 11.8 percent and summer is usually the time of lowest unemployment. But some jobless people come to Woodstock because it's more pleasant to be on welfare there than elsewhere.

Jane VanDeBogart, the only Democrat on the town board, said, "The irony is that they're blaming this problem on the only people in town who are trying to do something about it." Both Supervisor Cadden and Consta-

A Sense of Community

Family, which has only three paid staff members, Nancy Kafka, Tom Colello and Ruth Levine, has its office in a comfortably ratty old house near the center of town. This year's budget is just under $60,000. The money comes from Federal funds funneled through the county's mental-health and drug-abuse programs, from United Way and from local fund-raising.

In talking to the staff members and volunteers of Family, it is clear that they believe they are carrying out the best of the dream of the Woodstock Nation, the idea of loving and helping out of a sense of community.

Nickel carbonyl, one of several possible causes suggested for the Philadelphia mystery disease has emerged as the subject of not only one of the most tantalizing hyptoheses but also in some ways one of the most improbable.

There are ways in which nickel carbonyl poisoning closely resembles the symptoms of the so-called "legionaires disease" in Philadelphia. But there seems almost no way the Philadelphia victims could have come in contact with the toxic substance, especially in the quantities needed to fell 179 persons.

There have been suggestions from the laboratory, though still no proof, that the victims breathed nickel compounds into their lungs. But the tests have repeatedly heen rendered inconclusive because the tissue samples appear to have been con-taminated with nickel after the victims

JAILING OF NEWSMEN PROTESTED ON COAST

10 Busloads of Church Members From San Francisco Picket Courthouse in Fresno

By WALLACE TURNER

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10-Ten busloads of demonstrators from an activist church in a depressed district here will picket the Fresno County Courthouse around the clock this weekend to protest the jailing of four newsmen on contempt

We feel that the Judeo-Christian tradition's most prominent concern is free-dom," said the Rev. Jim Jones, 44 years old. "Where the spirit of God is, there's liberty. We've always been very freedom-

Two Fresno Bee editors and two reporters were jailed Sept. 3 in an attempt to make them tell the court how they gained access to secret grand jury testimony in an investigation of civic corruption.

A hearing is scheduled for Sept. 17, when the four men will tell the court that the attempt to coerce their testimony by jailing them will fail because they are determined not to betray their source.

Possible Sentences

Even if they are successful in this hear-ing, they will be liable to five-day jail terms and $500 fines for each count of contempt. This could range from an additional 15 days in jail for The Bee's managing editor. George Gruner, to 75 days for James H. Bort Jr., the newspaper's ombudsman, and 90 days for William K. Patterson and Joe Rosato, the two county stories that disclosed their access to the Discriminatory Practices Against courthouse reporters who wrote the three testimony.

Their attorneys will also argue that their information came from.

It was learned yesterday that neither

Mr. Jones, the pastor of the San Fran cisco church group picketing here, said, "The apathy is appalling. Either it's that or despair. I don't know what to make

The lieutenant, who commands the First Homicide Zone, said the youths were not members of a formal gang, but simply "hung out" together in the little pocket parks in the Village. He said the youths appeared to be from neither par-ticularly poor nor well-to-do families, but looked to him "like an ordinary slice of youth in the community.

The attackers, armed with baseball bats and sticks, swept into the park with stunning swiftness shortly after 8 P.M. Wednesday, striking many of their victims as they lounged on park benones playing cards and chatting.
